State Taxes 'Hold Line'

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Eyeing a possible tax shift come November, the State Board of Equalization granted Gov. J. James Exon's now familiar move Wednesday to "hold the line" on current state tax rates.

The 4-0 vote will maintain the 2.5% sales tax and the income tax rate at 15% of federal tax liability. State Treasurer Frank Marsh was absent.

Secretary of State Allen Beermann first posed a series of questions about the possibility of shortfalls, apparently leading to a possible tax boost justification.

But he was finally satisfied by State Tax Commissioner William E. Peters' prediction that anticipated tax revenues from present rates will be close to state expenses. Beermann joined in the unanimous vote.

But then he said, "It's my judgment, as close as we are (to a deficit), we may be thinking about an adjustment in the tax rates" when the board meets again just before Nov. 15.

Too Early To Tell

Beermann asked Peters if the income tax rate could be lowered to 14% then, with a companion sales tax increase to 3%. Peters said it's too early to tell now.

Exon again took a poke at the 1976 Legislature for overriding $11 million worth of his spending vetoes. As a result, Exon said Wednesday, he's "disappointed" he couldn't pursue his goal of reducing the income tax rate by 2%.

Before cating his vote, State Auditor Ray A. C. Johnson asked Peters how much of a dollar deficiency the state could weather to avoid calling a special legislative session, if the tax commissioner's revenue projections "don't hold up."

No Serious Problems

Peters estimated that coming up 4% short wouldn't cause any serious problems in paying the state's bills. Such a strained state treasury last November prompted a special legislative session.

Beermann earlier had favored a two-week board delay in action on tax rates, on grounds a sales tax increase might be warranted immediately and merited further study.

However, Peters told him the revenue department is anticipating that "slightly more than 4%" of state agencies' budgets will lapse unspent into the state general fund, providing a cushion. He acknowledged that "agencies have become more sophisticated in spending what we call June money," the fiscal year-end

But even with the recent $3.4 million in deficit appropriations by the Legislature, Peters said, it's "pretty hard to spend that much money in a short time — wisely."

The general fund carryover has been 4-8% in recent years, he said.

Beermann probed his tax increase necessity line, noting late payments of $5.5 million in state aid to schools and temporarily holding off on paying income tax refunds until sufficient income caught up Peters said the breaking point is past, and 45,000 refunds will go out this week. Requests for extensions on large payments due won't have any impact out of the ordinary, he added.

Peters 'Confident'

He's "confident" the situation should remain stable for a year, Peters said. He predicted a $12.2 million balance in the state general fund on June 30, and $14.3 million at the end of fiscal 1977.

Beermann contrasted Peters' projections vs. $10 million of trouble the legislative fiscal analyst predicted. Peters pointed out "both are estimates, and we're within 2% of each other."

Exon acknowledged that if the Equalization Board assumes the analyst's figures are correct, "we would be $10 million short," and should consider a sales tax increase.

But Exon backed up Peters, his appointee, saying he believes the revenue department statistics are accurate, not requiring any taxation changes.

'Clearer Picture'

By the board's November meeting, Exon said "we'll have a much clearer picture" on tax income Meanwhile, he championed the status quo "recognizing the fact that if projections don't hold," a boost will be required "to meet legislative appropriations."

Johnson asked if it would be "advantageous" to adjust the sales tax in smaller increments than one-half per cent at a time. Given store clerk computing problems of 2.75%, for example, Exon agreed anyway, "It's a point the Legislature should consider."

But Exon said it's "not worthwhile today" for the Equalization Board to adjust. Johnson said each half-percent on the sales tax would generate $30 million.

Teacher Pact May Not Raise Mill Levy

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln teacher's pay raises might not cost taxpayers a penny.

The teachers' salary and fringe benefits budget will increase by $1,418,994. To produce that sum, taxpayers would have to pay an additional three mills on their property, if everything stayed the same.

But it won't.

First, the valuation of property in the Lincoln Public School District is estimated to increase the equivalent of 2.75 mills. (When property values go up, it takes fewer mills to produce the same amount of money.)

Then, if Lincoln voters defeat a City Charter amendment and continue channeling Lincoln Electric System substitute tax payments to the district, that's equal to another mill.

That brings to 3.75 mills the additional levy which thus wouldn't be required from taxpayers. Finally, that could drop to three mills, if state aid payments decrease because of a possible enrollment decline.

If all the above happens, the school district share of the levy will remain at approximately 51.379 mills. Variations on any or all of the three factors are possible, however.

Lincoln Board of Education and Lincoln Education Association negotiators sealed the 1976-77 teacher contract terms Wednesday. The 7.62% overall salary budget increase includes 6.58% or $1,224,584 more dollars for pay, and 1.04% or a $194,410 addition to the fringe benefit package.

That part of the budget will increase from $18.6 million to $20,020,344, for about 1,538 teachers.

The board's payment for individuals' application to optional fringe benefits, such as insurance or cash, will increase from $180 to $240 annually for lowest-paid teachers, and from $384 to $528 for those on top of the pay scale. The latter comprise 95% to get the costlier payments.

Pay for an inexperienced, beginning teacher with a bachelors degree will move from $8,415 to $8,745. Second-year teachers with BAs will get a 9.59% pay boost, and at the top of that category, 4.99% more, to $12,595.

New salary ranges for teachers with BA degrees plus 18 hours postgraduate study are $9,000 to $13,750; masters or BA degrees plus 36 credits, $9,560 to $15,940; MA plus 36, or BA plus 72 credits, $10,270 to $17,055; and doctorate degrees, $11,080 to $17,968.

The new pay scale is designed to award the most dollars relatively to those in the mid-level categories and above. LEA Executive Director Robert F. Peterson said almost half of all Lincoln teachers are in that range.

"It's a good settlement," Peterson said, noting that some LEA board members would've preferred more. "It's about in line with the other settlements statewide."

With the new emphasis on top-of-the-ladder pay, "the beginning steps are going to be quite weak" compared to other high-paying districts, he said. "I look for Omaha districts to surpass us in base salary."

But he pointed out, "I suspect, in Lincoln, beginning salary is not that significant," not affecting applicants' quality, because of the district's reputation and teacher over-supply.

And mid-level teachers' improved pay should persuade them to "stay with all their talent," Peterson said.

For the board bargaining team, chief Terry Workman said, "This year's negotiations went a lot smoother." He said the two teams "worked very diligently trying to resolve many concerns the LEA presented" and found mutual solutions.

If the LEA membership and the school board ratify the pact, as expected, teachers will get what Peterson called a "far-reaching and pace-setting" maternity leave provision.

"We may be one of the first districts" anywhere to agree that paid sick leave may be used for temporary disabilities, he said. Those will include pregnancy, childbirth, false pregnancy, termination of pregnancy and child delivery.

Formerly, the board guaranteed job security during those conditions and allowed lengthy leaves, but without pay.

Other settlement highlights include an expanded early retirement incentive and death leave, more district staff development study credits applicable for pay raises, and policies governing forced staff reductions and extra duties to cover for absent teachers.

Fourteen LEA-board study committees will examine working conditions excluded from the formal agreement, ranging from teacher reassignments and income protection to alternate pay methods and class size.

Zinno Pedals Plane Into Aviation Annals

NORTH KINGSTOWN, R.I. (AP) — Like the Wright brothers, Joseph A. Zinno and his brother Clarence built a plane that flew its way into American aviation history.

The Wrights, who made their dreams a reality in another airplane at Kitty Hawk, N.C., needed a motor to get their plane into the sky 73 years ago.

But the Zinnos needed only Joseph's frantic pedaling and a lightweight, balsa wood and aluminum aircraft to accomplish that feat Wednesday at the abandoned Quonset Point Naval Air Station.

The five-second, 80- to 100-foot flight marked the first time in U.S. history that a man-powered aircraft has gotten off the ground. The feat had been accomplished previously in Europe.

On what was to be his fourth and final test run, Zinno veered from the center of a cracked asphalt runway and aimed his plane directly into the wind.

The aircraft, which was clocked by radar at 12 knots, first lifted its nose wheel off the ground. And then for five seconds, Zinno was airborne about 12 to 18 inches off the ground.

The flight came to an end near the edge of the runway when a gust of wind tipped the plane onto its left wing and brought the fuselage down with a crunch.

"This is the moment I was looking for. We know it's aerodynamically sound and it's structually sound," Zinno said after landing.

"In fact, we know it can fly, don't we? I never felt anything like this before. I could actually feel it going. When it started to go, I knew it was going. There was no doubt it was airborne. It felt good. Oh, it felt good."

Zinno, 52, who has spent four years and $5,000 building the plane, "The Olympian," decided after his third unsuccessful flight attempt Wednesday to tape the flaps that control the level of the wings into a rigid position.

After each of the three previous tries, he and his assistants spent at least 30 minutes patching the plastic which covers the wings and cockpit.

The landing was much rougher than Zinno had expected. Two outrigger struts on the left wing were bent double and the bicycle wheel in the fuselage was buckled.

The second of the Zinno brothers was not on hand for the flight Wednesday. "My brother Clarence, who helped me on the drive train, is coming up in a few days. He's just the man I need to help me on the wheel down there."

"Now we go back to the drawing board and clean up the mess," Zinno added. "We'll change some things we always wanted to change from the very beginning and continue my tests. I told you somewhere along the way we were going to get off the ground and we did it today. We did it today and next time we'll do better."

Irrigation Water Gets Priority

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Nebraska and Wyoming state officials have reached a tentative agreement on North Platte River flows which in essence gives water for irrigation priority over water for cooling power plants.

Gov. J. James Exon and Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas Wednesday outlined in separate interviews the general terms of an agreement worked out with Wyoming Gov. Ed Herschler concerning water used by a planned 1.5-million-kilowatt, coal-fired power station to be located near Wheatland.

Lincoln has a stake in the matter, since the Lincoln Electric System is financing 13% of the station's costs.

Exon said, "We found ground for basic agreement. Both Nebraska and Wyoming support creation of the power plants and maintenance of reasonable flows downstream.

"Neither state feels it is advantageous or wise to go into federal courts on this."

As explained by Douglas, the agreement states that during non-irrigation season the Laramie River Power Station can use and store water for its needs. During the irrigation season, Wyoming agrees to let the water flow through to Nebraska.

Under a 1943 U.S. Supreme Court decision, Nebraska is entitled to 75% of the flow between the Guernsey Reservoir and the Tri-State Dam while Wyoming gets 25%.

Douglas said this should not pose any problem since Nebraska normally uses only 66% of the water during non-irrigation periods.

In the event a serious drought occurred, Douglas said "it might very well happen" that the power station would have to reduce its power generation to meet Nebraska irrigators' needs.

"In terms of priorities, we felt water (for irrigation) is number one of the two," Douglas said. "It's no good to have power to pump water if there is no water."

Exon declined to release a copy of the proposed agreement and said he has concerns about a number of points which he must settle before he decides to sign the agreement. He declined to elaborate on those terms.

Douglas noted that representatives of the power station must also agree to the proposal. As yet, he said, they have not been approached.

"We're hoping this is an amicable way to get both water and power," Douglas said.

Projections indicate the Laramie River Power Station will remove approximately 40,000 acre feet of water a year from the North Platte. The Tri-County Irrigation District, the Central Nebraska Public Power and Irrigation District and the South Platte United Chambers of Commerce have voiced concerns about the potential loss of water for irrigators.

Douglas said plans for an irrigation project in conjunction with the power station, which would draw even more water away, is years away from reality.

"It's a very interesting question, a very tough question," Douglas said. "I think 51-53% of the first plant's output will go to Nebraska."

He noted there is some legal question whether the flow of the Laramie River, a tributary of the North Platte, is part of the pact between Nebraska and Wyoming upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Wyoming maintains it is not, while Nebraska says it is. If the matter were to go to court, that would be the central issue.

In the proposed agreement, Douglas said, neither state modifies its position on the question.

Until now, Douglas noted, it hasn't mattered whether the Laramie River was part of the court decree in fact or not.

Crawfordsville, Ind. (AP) — John Gunset may think twice before he calls for assistance on a citizens' band radio again.

Gunset, 18, of Omaha, Neb., was stranded on Interstate 74 near here Tuesday after his car stalled.

Police said that after issuing his radio call for help, a driver stopped on the other side of the interstate, walked across the road, surveyed the situation, pulled a knife and robbed Gunset of $54.

Fuel Chief Predicts Second Oil Embargo

CHICAGO (AP) — Federal Energy Administrator Frank Zarb said Wednesday there is "an all too real possibility" another oil embargo will be imposed by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries that "would make the last one look like a picnic."

In an address to the annual American Power Conference here, Zarb said, "I am personally convinced that we stand a disturbingly great chance of being subjected to another embargo" like the one imposed by Arab oil exporting nations during 1973-74.

"The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has the oil we need, and they can be expected to make the most of the seller's market they enjoy," he said. "As long as we continue to become increasingly dependent on the OPEC nations for our petroleum supplies, we will be increasingly subject to arbitrary OPEC decisions on price and supply."

Zarb did not predict when another embargo might come, but he said if one is imposed "we won't just have long gasoline lines In some areas, we won't have any lines, because we won't have any gasoline And there will be other areas — regions where electricity generation depends on imported residual oil — where lights may simply go out."

He called the last embargo "a good swift kick in the tail." But, he said, "like a little boy who tends to forget why he was spanked last week, the country seems to have conveniently erased the memory of the embargo from its consciousness."

Zarb said as the U.S. economy has improved, the nation's energy problems have worsened. Increasing consumption of petroleum products has accompanied economic recovery and means the nation must import more of these products, he said.

The nation "has been living on borrowed time for much too long," he said, and called for steps to make the nation energy self-sufficient or at least "embargo-proof" by 1985.

These are:

—Optimum energy conservation, more than is being done at present.

—Doubling the use of coal, "our most abundant domestic energy resource."

—Accelerated development of nuclear power plants.

—More exploration and development efforts to produce more oil and natural gas from domestic sources.

Over the long run, he said, solar energy and coal liquification and gasification will be important sources of energy. But he said this will not happen before 1985.

The nation's energy problem will not mean a decline in the standard of living of the country, Zarb said.

It will, however, mean that the nation must move from an era of "chromium-plated gunboats" to more sensible automobiles, as well as development of mass transportation and construction of more energy-efficient buildings and factories, he said.

Ford Says Reagan Speaks 'Complete, Utter Nonsense'

By United Press International

President Ford, defending his record on defense, Wednesday called the United States the world's greatest military power and accused political critics of "complete and utter nonsense" in claiming Russian superiority.

Democrats Jimmy Carter, Henry Jackson, Morris Udall and George Wallace stumped Pennsylvania for support in the state's April 27 primary

Ford, speaking in Washington to the Daughters of the American Revolution, rebutted the defense policy criticisms of Ronald Reagan without naming anyone, saying, "The United States is today the single most powerful nation on earth — indeed in all of history And we are going to keep it that way.

"Recent charges that the United States is in a position of military inferiority and that we have accepted Soviet world domination are complete and utter nonsense."

Reagan, campaigning through Georgia Wednesday, compared Ford's economic policies to "uncreasing the temperature of a very sick patient and then trying to break the thermometer If they'll stop spending, I'll stop talking."

He described the Senate and House as "the most irresponsible Congress in the memory of every one of us."

Irrigation Water Gets Priority

By BOB GUENTHER

Nebraska and Wyoming state officials have reached a tentative agreement on North Platte River flows which in essence gives water for irrigation priority over water for cooling power plants.

Gov. J. James Exon and Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas Wednesday outlined in separate interviews the general terms of an agreement worked out with Wyoming Gov. Ed Herschler concerning water used by a planned 1.5-million-kilowatt, coal-fired power station to be located near Wheatland.

Exon said, "We found ground for basic agreement. Both Nebraska and Wyoming support creation of the power plants and maintenance of reasonable flows downstream.

"Neither state feels it is advantageous or wise to go into federal courts on this."

As explained by Douglas, the agreement states that during non-irrigation season the Laramie River Power Station can use and store water for its needs. During the irrigation season, Wyoming agrees to let the water flow through to Nebraska.

Under a 1943 U.S. Supreme Court decision, Nebraska is entitled to 75% of the flow between the Guernsey Reservoir and the Tri-State Dam while Wyoming gets 25%.

Douglas said this should not pose any problem since Nebraska normally uses only 66% of the water during non-irrigation periods.

In the event a serious drought occurred, Douglas said "it might very well happen" that the power station would have to reduce its power generation to meet Nebraska irrigators' needs.

"In terms of priorities, we felt water (for irrigation) is number one of the two," Douglas said. "It's no good to have power to pump water if there is no water."

Exon declined to release a copy of the proposed agreement and said he has concerns about a number of points which he must settle before he decides to sign the agreement. He declined to elaborate on those terms.

Douglas noted that representatives of the power station must also agree to the proposal. As yet, he said, they have not been approached.

"We're hoping this is an amicable way to get both water and power," Douglas said.

Projections indicate the Laramie River Power Station will remove approximately 40,000 acre feet of water a year from the North Platte. The Tri-County Irrigation District, the Central Nebraska Public Power and Irrigation District and the South Platte United Chambers of Commerce have voiced concerns about the potential loss of water for irrigators.

Douglas said plans for an irrigation project in conjunction with the power station, which would draw even more water away, is years away from reality.

"It's a very interesting question, a very tough question," Douglas said. "I think 51-53% of the first plant's output will go to Nebraska."

He noted there is some legal question whether the flow of the Laramie River, a tributary of the North Platte, is part of the pact between Nebraska and Wyoming upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Wyoming maintains it is not, while Nebraska says it is. If the matter were to go to court, that would be the central issue.

In the proposed agreement, Douglas said, neither state modifies its position on the question.

Until now, Douglas noted, it hasn't mattered whether the Laramie River was part of the court decree in fact or not.

Crawfordsville, Ind. (AP) — John Gunset may think twice before he calls for assistance on a citizens' band radio again.

Gunset, 18, of Omaha, Neb., was stranded on Interstate 74 near here Tuesday after his car stalled.

Police said that after issuing his radio call for help, a driver stopped on the other side of the interstate, walked across the road, surveyed the situation, pulled a knife and robbed Gunset of $54.

Fuel Chief Predicts Second Oil Embargo

CHICAGO (AP) — Federal Energy Administrator Frank Zarb said Wednesday there is "an all too real possibility" another oil embargo will be imposed by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries that "would make the last one look like a picnic."

In an address to the annual American Power Conference here, Zarb said, "I am personally convinced that we stand a disturbingly great chance of being subjected to another embargo" like the one imposed by Arab oil exporting nations during 1973-74.

"The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has the oil we need, and they can be expected to make the most of the seller's market they enjoy," he said. "As long as we continue to become increasingly dependent on the OPEC nations for our petroleum supplies, we will be increasingly subject to arbitrary OPEC decisions on price and supply."

Zarb did not predict when another embargo might come, but he said if one is imposed "we won't just have long gasoline lines. In some areas, we won't have any lines, because we won't have any gasoline. And there will be other areas — regions where electricity generation depends on imported residual oil — where lights may simply go out."

He called the last embargo "a good swift kick in the tail." But, he said, "like a little boy who tends to forget why he was spanked last week, the country seems to have conveniently erased the memory of the embargo from its consciousness."

Zarb said as the U.S. economy has improved, the nation's energy problems have worsened. Increasing consumption of petroleum products has accompanied economic recovery and means the nation must import more of these products, he said.

The nation "has been living on borrowed time for much too long," he said, and called for steps to make the nation energy self-sufficient or at least "embargo-proof" by 1985.

These are:

—Optimum energy conservation, more than is being done at present.

—Doubling the use of coal, "our most abundant domestic energy resource."

—Accelerated development of nuclear power plants.

—More exploration and development efforts to produce more oil and natural gas from domestic sources.

Over the long run, he said, solar energy and coal liquification and gasification will be important sources of energy. But he said this will not happen before 1985.

The nation's energy problem will not mean a decline in the standard of living of the country, Zarb said.

It will, however, mean that the nation must move from an era of "chromium-plated gunboats" to more sensible automobiles, as well as development of mass transportation and construction of more energy-efficient buildings and factories, he said.

Ford Says Reagan Speaks 'Complete, Utter Nonsense'

By United Press International

President Ford, defending his record on defense, Wednesday called the United States the world's greatest military power and accused political critics of "complete and utter nonsense" in claiming Russian superiority.

Democrats Jimmy Carter, Henry Jackson, Morris Udall and George Wallace stumped Pennsylvania for support in the state's April 27 primary.

Ford, speaking in Washington to the Daughters of the American Revolution, rebutted the defense policy criticisms of Ronald Reagan without naming anyone, saying, "The United States is today the single most powerful nation on earth — indeed, in all of history. And we are going to keep it that way.

"Recent charges that the United States is in a position of military inferiority and that we have accepted Soviet world domination are complete and utter nonsense."

Reagan, campaigning through Georgia Wednesday, compared Ford's economic policies to "increasing the temperature of a very sick patient and then trying to break the thermometer. If they'll stop spending, I'll stop talking."

He described the Senate and House as "the most irresponsible Congress in the memory of every one of us."

Performer Choked By Boa

An entertainer who uses snakes in his nightly show was undergoing treatment early Thursday morning at Lincoln General Hospital after he was severely strangled by a boa constrictor during his Wednesday night show.

Lincoln police said that Joe Savage was taken by ambulance personnel from Little Bo Center, at 2630 Cornhusker Hwy., after he collapsed during his act with a boa constrictor.

Apparently Savage staged a "fake collapse" as part of the act, then got to his feet to the applause of the crowd. But, according to an eye witness, he failed to move after his collapse. One patron of the popular night spot apparently gave Savage mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, the source said.

Social Security Checks To Rise 6.4% In July

Washington (UPI) — Monthly benefit checks will increase in July by 6.4% for 37 million Social Security beneficiaries, based on new cost of living figures released Wednesday.

A spokesman for the Social Security Administration said the boost would apply to regular beneficiaries and those qualifying for Supplementary Security Income (SSI).

The automatic benefit increase will affect 32.6 million retirees, disabled persons and other Social Security recipients, and 4.4 million needy aged, blind and disabled persons receiving SSI payments.

An 8% monthly benefit boost, the first automatic increase under 1972 legislation, took effect in June 1975. It increased maximum benefits from $316.30 to $341.70; minimum benefits from $93.80 to $101.40, and the average monthly check from $184 to $200.

The 6.4% hike, based on 1975 earnings, will have this effect on benefits:

— The maximum for a man retiring in 1976 at age 65 rises from $364 to $387.30.

— The minimum benefit for the same individual goes from $101.40 to $107.90.

— The average benefit for a retiree goes from $204 to $218.

— An elderly widow receiving $195 would get $208.

— The average monthly check for a surviving mother with two children would rise from $479 to $510.

— For a woman retiring this year at age 65 and receiving the maximum $378.80, the June benefit payable in July would rise to $403.10.

SSI monthly federal payments of $157.70 for an individual and $236.60 for a couple would increase to $167.80 and $251.80 respectively, if states which supplement these payments choose to pass on the federal increase.

For the most part, supplementing states do not have to pass on the federal increase to SSI recipients, a Social Security spokesman said.

Prices Rise Only 0.2% In March, But Don't Get Your Hopes Up

Washington (UPI) — The burden of inflation lifted slightly from American consumers during the first three months of 1976, when the cost of living showed its smallest quarterly increase in nearly four years, the Labor Department said Wednesday.

Consumer prices rose 0.2% in March, capping an annual increase rate of 2.9% since the start of 1976. Not since June 1972 has the quarterly rise been so small.

This improvement over annual increases of 7% in 1975 and 12.2% in 1974 was much more pronounced than the administration had expected.

President Ford's top economic adviser, William Seidman, said a continuation of this trend might cause the administration to scale down its projection of 6% inflation by the end of 1976.

But Seidman and other government economists cautioned that the inflation rate undoubtedly will exceed the January-March level later in the year. "We should not get euphoric," said Herman Liebling, chief treasury economist.

Despite the slack in inflation, a drop in average weekly earnings in March caused real spendable income to decline 9.7% following increases in the previous two months.

Following increases of 0.1% in February and 0.4% in January, consumer prices in March were 6.1% over a year ago. The consumer price index stood at 167.5 — meaning that goods and services costing $100 in 1967, now cost $167.50.

Last One Was Built Wednesday

DETROIT (AP) — With all the hoopla that traditionally accompanies the introduction of a new model, the last U.S.-built convertible rolled off the assembly line Wednesday, ending a 74-year era of American ragtops, of cruising down the avenue with the wind whipping through your hair.

"Like the running board and the rumble seat, the convertible is an item which history has passed by," Cadillac General Manager Edward C. Kennard said.

The $11,049 white Cadillac Eldorado, piloted by Kennard, was the 200th "Last of the Convertibles" built by Cadillac. The car is to be kept by General Motors "for historical purposes," he said.

Kennard, accompanied in the front seat by Detroit Mayor Coleman Young and H. B. Brawner, Cadillac general manufacturing manager, wheeled the car off the line amid balloons, banners and employes dressed in jackets and T-shirts proclaiming they worked on the last soft top.

They Left The Sitting Room In The Street

BROCKTON, Mass. (AP) — Part of Albert G. Calef's 75-year-old mansion was left by the roadway between Brockton and West Bridgewater when movers decided to call it a day after "a few minor problems" arose.

Calef decided to move the 12-bedroom mansion five miles from here to neighboring West Bridgewater rather than let it fall victim to the wrecking ball in a parking lot expansion project. He knew that moving the house on Tuesday wouldn't be easy, but:

—The sections of the house, cut up for moving, were too wide to fit on the street without running into lightpoles. Movers had to maneuver for some time before being able to turn the sections sideways on their trucks in order to start off down the road.

—Then autos on the car lot across the street had to be moved so that trucks carrying the mansion sections could turn the corner without destroying signs, lightpoles and trees.

—Later, the chimney on one section collapsed, dumping bricks and debris onto the road.

—Brockton Edison work crews had to be called to temporarily jiggle power lines so they wouldn't be struck.

—The power lines short-circuited while being disconnected, plunging the entire community of West Bridgewater into a 30-minute power failure.

—A half-mile down the road, one of the trucks had a couple of flat tires.

That's when movers decided to leave the sitting room, drawing room and library at a wide section in the road and call it quits for the day.

On Wednesday, a West Bridgewater police official said part of the house "is right on our main street, and have we got a traffic jam. They're going to have to get it off the street tonight. It's going to take a couple of more hours."

Representatives of the moving company, Merry Contracting Service, were unavailable for comment.

Double-Barreled Defeat Dealt To U.S. Taxpayers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Taxpayers seeking constitutional protection from Internal Revenue Service agents suffered a double-barreled defeat in the Supreme Court Wednesday.

The court ruled 7 to 1 that a taxpayer under investigation is not entitled to the complete statement of constitutional rights that must be given to a criminal suspect already in custody.

In a separate decision, the justices ruled 8 to 0 that a taxpayer or his lawyer may be required to surrender tax return papers prepared by the taxpayer's accountant. They said this does not violate the constitutional privilege against self-incrimination.

In another decision with tax implications, the court ruled 6 to 2 that it is constitutional to subpoena an individual's bank records for use as evidence against him in his trial.

On an unrelated issue, the justices ruled 5 to 3 that government personnel files are not protected under the Freedom of Information Act unless disclosure would be "a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy."

Social Security Checks To Rise 6.4% In July

Washington (UPI) — Monthly benefit checks will increase in July by 6.4% for 37 million Social Security beneficiaries, based on new cost of living figures released Wednesday.

SSI monthly federal payments of $157.70 for an individual and $236.60 for a couple would increase to $167.80 and $251.80 respectively, if states which supplement these payments choose to pass on the federal increase.

For the most part, supplementing states do not have to pass on the federal increase to SSI recipients, a Social Security spokesman said.

Last One Was Built Wednesday

DETROIT (AP) — With all the hoopla that traditionally accompanies the introduction of a new model, the last U.S.-built convertible rolled off the assembly line Wednesday, ending a 74-year era of American ragtops, of cruising down the avenue with the wind whipping through your hair.

"Like the running board and the rumble seat, the convertible is an item which history has passed by," Cadillac General Manager Edward C. Kennard said.

The $11,049 white Cadillac Eldorado, piloted by Kennard, was the 200th "Last of the Convertibles" built by Cadillac. The car is to be kept by General Motors "for historical purposes," he said.

Kennard, accompanied in the front seat by Detroit Mayor Coleman Young and H. B. Brawner, Cadillac general manufacturing manager, wheeled the car off the line amid balloons, banners and employes dressed in jackets and T-shirts proclaiming they worked on the last soft top.

They Left The Sitting Room In The Street

BROCKTON, Mass. (AP) — Part of Albert G. Calef's 75-year-old mansion was left by the roadway between Brockton and West Bridgewater when movers decided to call it a day after "a few minor problems" arose.

Calef decided to move the 12-bedroom mansion five miles from here to neighboring West Bridgewater rather than let it fall victim to the wrecking ball in a parking lot expansion project. He knew that moving the house on Tuesday wouldn't be easy, but:

—The sections of the house, cut up for moving, were too wide to fit on the street without running into lightpoles. Movers had to maneuver for some time before being able to turn the sections sideways on their trucks in order to start off down the road.

—Then autos on the car lot across the street had to be moved so that trucks carrying the mansion sections could turn the corner without destroying signs, lightpoles and trees.

—Later, the chimney on one section collapsed, dumping bricks and debris onto the road.

—Brockton Edison work crews had to be called to temporarily jiggle power lines so they wouldn't be struck.

—The power lines short-circuited while being disconnected, plunging the entire community of West Bridgewater into a 30-minute power failure.

—A half-mile down the road, one of the trucks had a couple of flat tires.

That's when movers decided to leave the sitting room, drawing room and library at a wide section in the road and call it quits for the day.

On Wednesday, a West Bridgewater police official said part of the house "is right on our main street, and have we got a traffic jam. They're going to have to get it off the street tonight. It's going to take a couple of more hours."

Representatives of the moving company, Merry Contracting Service, were unavailable for comment.

Double-Barreled Defeat Dealt To U.S. Taxpayers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Taxpayers seeking constitutional protection from Internal Revenue Service agents suffered a double-barreled defeat in the Supreme Court Wednesday.

The court ruled 7 to 1 that a taxpayer under investigation is not entitled to the complete statement of constitutional rights that must be given to a criminal suspect already in custody.

In a separate decision, the justices ruled 8 to 0 that a taxpayer or his lawyer may be required to surrender tax return papers prepared by the taxpayer's accountant. They said this does not violate the constitutional privilege against self-incrimination.

In another decision with tax implications, the court ruled 6 to 2 that it is constitutional to subpoena an individual's bank records for use as evidence against him in his trial.

On an unrelated issue, the justices ruled 5 to 3 that government personnel files are not protected under the Freedom of Information Act unless disclosure would be "a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy."

Queen Celebrates 50th Birthday At Royal Ball

ANNE . . . hurt. AP

London (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth II celebrated her 50th birthday by dancing into the early hours of Wednesday at a glittering royal ball, and the Britons she has reigned over for nearly a quarter-century voiced their loyalty and affection.

As the clock of the curfew tower struck midnight, 600 guests in the white-and-gilt queen's ballroom of Windsor Castle gathered around Elizabeth in the middle of the floor and broke into "Happy Birthday."

At 2:40 a.m., the precise time of her birth April 21, 1926, her husband Prince Philip led the queen in a swirling waltz. Elizabeth, in a green silk skirt, danced until past 3 a.m., when she slipped away to her private apartment in the castle.

Princess Anne, who attended the ball, got up early Wednesday to travel 110 miles to a country horse competition where she was thrown and rolled on by her mount. She suffered a cracked bone in her back and was hospitalized for her injuries, which also included concussion and shock.

The British royal family, foreign royalty and British political leaders were among the guests at the ball. But most of those invited reflected the queen's private interests — her friends, associates and employes in the fields of horse racing and thoroughbred breeding.

The ball was preceded by a private dinner for 60 family and closest friends. They included the queen's sister, Princess Margaret, and her husband, Antony Armstrong-Jones, appearing together for the second time since their agreement to split up last month.

One notable absentee was the queen's new prime minister, James Callaghan. He assumed office two weeks earlier and pleaded pressure of work for keeping him away.

Opposition Conservative Party parliamentarian Ian Grist accused Callaghan of giving "a clear demonstration of the ill-mannered and drably egalitarian society sought by those leading the Labor Party."

Britain's national press joined in praise of the queen's performance in 24 years on the throne.

Envoy To Lebanon Quits

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford announced on Wednesday the resignation of G. McMurtrie Godley as ambassador to troubled Lebanon and said he is nominating career diplomat Francis E. Meloy Jr. as his successor.

Godley has been in ill health and recently underwent surgery.

Meloy, 59, has been ambassador to Guatemala since December 1973. Before that he was ambassador to the Dominican Republic and deputy chief of mission in Rome.

Armored PLA Units Take Up Beirut Positions

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Armored units of the Palestine Liberation Army took up strategic positions in and around Beirut Wednesday to enforce a shaky cease-fire.

At least 93 persons were reported killed and 150 wounded during fierce exchanges of rocket, mortar and artillery fire between warring Moslem and Christian groups during the day, but security officials said the fighting died down noticeably at night in most of the Beirut area, and the cease-fire was holding better.

Politicians sought a formula to bring about President Suleiman Franjieh's departure from office.

Statements by politicians indicated Franjieh, a Christian, may not have signed a constitutional amendment on his resignation even though Moslem Premier Rashid Karami said he had.

Franjieh sent two of his close aides to a conference in Damascus with Syrian President Hafez Assad, reportedly to try to convince him to eliminate the Palestinians from peace efforts under way in Lebanon.

U.S. Affirms Support Of Black Rule In Africa

WASHINGTON (AP) — About to set out for Africa, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger affirmed U.S. support Wednesday for majority rule by blacks throughout the continent.

Evidently aiming his remarks at white-ruled Rhodesia and South Africa, Kissinger said that the United States shares in the "human and political aspirations for majority rule on the part of black Africans."

Speaking at a swearing-in ceremony for W. Beverly Carter Jr. as the new ambassador to Liberia, Kissinger also signaled a stepped-up American aid program that other officials said privately he would unveil in a number of speeches on the trip beginning next weekend.

Whatever U.S. policy has been in the past, he said, the United States is firmly committed to "the aspirations for economic and human progress on the continent."

Carter, a 55-year-old native of Coatesville, Pa., is the black ambassador who irritated Kissinger last summer when he took a hand in conveying money to rebels in Zaire who were holding three Americans and a Dutch student they had kidnaped in Tanzania.

Then U.S. envoy in Tanzania, Carter had breached the Kissinger policy of not negotiating with terrorists for the release of captives. Kissinger based it on the theory that paying ransom would lead to further kidnaping.

"I suppose if I were trying to be cute," he told some 250 friends and colleagues, "I might say it's nice to be in from out of the cold."

Noting Kissinger's presence, he said to Kissinger, the secretary "doesn't always have the time to swear in ambassadors, he sometimes swears them out."

In a serious vein, Carter called his appointment to Monrovia "a day of happiness, a day of reconciliation, a day of love and peace."

After an overnight stop in London, Kissinger is due in Kenya on Sunday and proceeds from there to Tanzania, Zambia, Zaire, Ghana, Liberia, Senegal and back to Kenya to head the U.S. delegation to a U.N. conference on economic problems.

France Has First Woman General

PARIS (AP) — France named its first woman general on Wednesday — Valerie Andre, a 54-year-old doctor, parachutist and helicopter pilot with more experience under fire than many of the male officers of her generation in Western Europe.

She has been decorated with the Croix de Guerre and the Legion of Honor, and now outranks her husband, a colonel in the reserves.

"They painted a red cross on my helicopter," recalled Gen. Andre, talking about her days as a rescue pilot in the French Indochinese war. "But that didn't spare me from anything and my aircraft was hit several times."

As the French attempt to maintain its Indochina colonies ground toward failure, the doctor flew 125 combat missions, jumped 21 times in combat conditions and evacuated 165 wounded soldiers. Some 365 combat flights came later in France's colonial war in Algeria.

"You're a military doctor voluntarily, and when you put on the uniform you can be sure you're not going to make a fortune," she said. "It's a marvelous job though."

The promotion came on her birthday. With the appointment, France became the third North Atlantic Treaty Organization country to have a woman general. The others are the United States, which has four, and Britain.

India Says Bangladesh Troops Attacked Its Patrol

©The New York Times

New Delhi-India charged Wednesday that Bangladesh soldiers had fired across the border with mortar and automatic weapons Tuesday in an "unprovoked" attack on an Indian patrol.

The Indians fired back "in self-defense," the government statement said here, and there were casualties on both sides in "heavy fire." The number of casualties was not disclosed.

According to India, it was the second Bangladesh attack in two days along the tense and heavily-armed border 90 miles north of Dacca, the capital of Bangladesh.

In an official statement calling the incident "serious," the New Delhi government said it had "protested emphatically" to the Bangladesh embassy here.

Bangladesh and India, which used to be the closest of allies, have had strained relations since the coup d'etat last August in which Bangladesh leader Sheik Mujibur Rahman was assassinated.

Last Surviving Sextuplet Dies In Oxygen Tent

Newcastle, England (AP) — The last surviving sextuplet born a week ago to Christine Price died in an oxygen tent Wednesday after living for 170 hours.

The six babies, three boys and three girls weighing between 1 pound 4 ounces and 2 pounds 3 ounces, were born two months prematurely to Mrs. Price in a maternity hospital here. Two of the girls died within hours of birth. A third baby died the following night, and two more died Saturday.

Mrs. Price, 30, had been taking a fertility drug. Tuesday night she said that despite the tragedy of the babies dying, she would use the drug again if necessary.

Rhodesian Shot By Guerrillas

Salisbury, Rhodesia (AP) — Guerrillas shot and wounded a farmer Wednesday night in Rhodesia's southeastern ranchland near where three South African tourists were killed Sunday, informed sources said.

A hospital official at Fort Victoria said farmer Helgard Muller, 25, has been admitted to hospital with bullet wounds, but would be released from the hospital Thursday.

Informed sources in Salisbury said Muller was driving between his two ranches to check cattle when guerrillas opened fire. The report caused new concern in Salisbury where anxious suburbanites already wondered if the time had not come to buy guns.

For perhaps the first time in a decade the complacency of the country's 270,000 whites, whose minority government rules 5.7 million blacks, has been ruffled by guerrilla offensives on their 800-mile long eastern border with Marxist Mozambique.

She has been decorated with the Croix de Guerre and the Legion of Honor, and now outranks her husband, a colonel in the reserves.

"They painted a red cross on my helicopter," recalled Gen. Andre, talking about her days as a rescue pilot in the French Indochinese war. "But that didn't spare me from anything and my aircraft was hit several times."

As the French attempt to maintain its Indochina colonies ground toward failure, the doctor flew 125 combat missions, jumped 21 times in combat conditions and evacuated 165 wounded soldiers. Some 365 combat flights came later in France's colonial war in Algeria.

"You're a military doctor voluntarily, and when you put on the uniform you can be sure you're not going to make a fortune," she said. "It's a marvelous job though."

The promotion came on her birthday. With the appointment, France became the third North Atlantic Treaty Organization country to have a woman general. The others are the United States, which has four, and Britain.

India Says Bangladesh Troops Attacked Its Patrol

©The New York Times

New Delhi-India charged Wednesday that Bangladesh soldiers had fired across the border with mortar and automatic weapons Tuesday in an "unprovoked" attack on an Indian patrol.

The Indians fired back "in self-defense," the government statement said here, and there were casualties on both sides in "heavy fire." The number of casualties was not disclosed.

According to India, it was the second Bangladesh attack in two days along the tense and heavily-armed border 90 miles north of Dacca, the capital of Bangladesh.

In an official statement calling the incident "serious," the New Delhi government said it had "protested emphatically" to the Bangladesh embassy here.

Bangladesh and India, which used to be the closest of allies, have had strained relations since the coup d'etat last August in which Bangladesh leader Sheik Mujibur Rahman was assassinated.

Last Surviving Sextuplet Dies In Oxygen Tent

Newcastle, England (AP) — The last surviving sextuplet born a week ago to Christine Price died in an oxygen tent Wednesday after living for 170 hours.

The six babies, three boys and three girls weighing between 1 pound 4 ounces and 2 pounds 3 ounces, were born two months prematurely to Mrs. Price in a maternity hospital here. Two of the girls died within hours of birth. A third baby died the following night, and two more died Saturday.

Mrs. Price, 30, had been taking a fertility drug. Tuesday night she said that despite the tragedy of the babies dying, she would use the drug again if necessary.

Rhodesian Shot By Guerrillas

Salisbury, Rhodesia (AP) — Guerrillas shot and wounded a farmer Wednesday night in Rhodesia's southeastern ranchland near where three South African tourists were killed Sunday, informed sources said.

A hospital official at Fort Victoria said farmer Helgard Muller, 25, has been admitted to hospital with bullet wounds, but would be released from the hospital Thursday.

Informed sources in Salisbury said Muller was driving between his two ranches to check cattle when guerrillas opened fire. The report caused new concern in Salisbury where anxious suburbanites already wondered if the time had not come to buy guns.

For perhaps the first time in a decade the complacency of the country's 270,000 whites, whose minority government rules 5.7 million blacks, has been ruffled by guerrilla offensives on their 800-mile long eastern border with Marxist Mozambique.

Repeal Is Shortsighted

Some citizens in southeast Nebraska are mounting a campaign to repeal LB861, the new wildlife habitat preservation law passed this last session of the Legislature.

The law is funded through hunting and fishing fees, which will be roughly doubled.

People opposed to the law are now circulating petitions hoping to get enough signatures to put a repeal proposal on the state ballot.

We think opposition to the wildlife habitat preservation bill is basically shortsighted and selfish.

Habitat for wildlife is diminishing at a rapid rate and the trend must be reversed if this and future generations are to be able to live in a world with a proper ecological balance and if they are to enjoy fishing and hunting as the sports are practiced today.

It will take economic sacrifices to turn the tide, there can be no doubting that.

Productive land and even marginal land will not be pledged to habitat just by wishing it so and maintaining the status quo. Incentives have to be provided private landowners to set aside habitat areas and government has to undertake an ambitious program of reserving public lands.

People who oppose such efforts maybe are not aware that the frontier has shrunk, that man competes with wildlife for the land that is left, and that efforts must be undertaken to strike a reasonable balance between the two forces.

Today's neglect of the situation will severely limit tomorrow's outdoor opportunities.

A Great Waste

James Reston's column on this page Wednesday about what Nelson Rockefeller has been doing lately got us to thinking about how politics wastes talent and opportunity.

Rockefeller, who is vice president of the United States in case anyone has forgotten, is an enormously talented, energetic, resourceful man who is very worried but also optimistic about the future of this nation.

His talents should have been and should be put to better use, but Rockefeller was dropped like a hot potato by President Ford because some Republicans who were winking at Ronald Reagan hate the vice president.

The Reaganites and many of those wavering between the two declared Republican candidates who were yelling for Rockefeller's head also want the scalp of Henry Kissinger, who has won a deserved place in history for his work. Kissinger is now considered a political liability. Although he has caused many of his problems, his weakened position is largely the result of political opportunism on the part of both GOP camps.

Similarly, most of the Democrats — and the Republicans — are ignoring the opportunity to get to the root of the integration issue and are concentrating instead on trying to exploit Jimmy Carter's semantical goof for political gain.

It is all superficial, the wasting of talent and opportunity for serious discussion. The sacrifice of talent and opportunity to make points with the voters actually demeans both the candidates and the electorate. Such opportunism should not be rewarded.

The Storm Subsides

A tentative view has been expressed by the director of the Nebraska I-80 Bicentennial Sculpture Project that attitudes of many Nebraskans toward the project are beginning to change as work progresses.

Skepticism and opposition are on the wane, says Art Thompson of Lincoln. He said that although some people remain firm in their opposition to the winning designs and the method of selection, many others have told him that once they understood the project, their attitudes changed.

And he believes there will be even greater acceptance once the sculptures are completed. "Once they see the real thing, their reaction has got to be different," Thompson said.

That's our feeling, also.

The rancorous public debate, the emotional, knee-jerk opposition to other than traditional art has subsided somewhat, even if some deepseated opposition remains.

As the ten sculptures rise in their gardens at the rest stops along Nebraska's Interstate highway, we think a feeling of pride will develop.

Due to the legislative hearings which delayed starting the project, several of the pieces will not be completed by the July 4 target date. But they should be done soon after, to complete an effort termed by national Bicentennial officials at the best and most unique of its kind.

Maintaining The Macho

WASHINGTON — At a low point in his years as prime minister, Harold Wilson was portrayed on the London stage as a pudgy little man in a wrinkled Batman suit, telling everyone what wonders he could perform. That image is brought to mind by Henry Kissinger's current effort, in speeches around the country, to rally political support for his foreign policy.

The Kissinger road show has a desperate tone, and no wonder. For the secretary of state is campaigning at the same time on behalf of a policy and of a President who has effectively abandoned that policy.

In the world vision that Kissinger has offered the country since 1969, detente has a central place. The fundamental task of foreign policy, he has told us repeatedly, is to develop a closer, more mature, less dangerous relationship between the United States and the Soviet Union — one based on mutual perception of the advantages in easing tensions, avoiding hysteria and reducing the risk of nuclear war.

President Ford, in the course of his campaign, has done more than drop the word "detente" from his vocabulary. He has abandoned the essential theme of calm and confidence in foreign policy. He denounces Ronald Reagan but sounds more like him every day, more hysterical, more xenophobic.

The Ford campaign is full of exaggerated talk about threats to American survival, the need for higher defense spending and grotesquely expensive new weapons systems. In his fear of Reagan, the President has even been reduced to competing in militance about the Panama Canal. The other day he undercut long-established policy by saying that the United States would "never" give up defense or operating rights at the canal.

It must be painful for Kissinger to have a President who is so utterly unable to articulate his vision of a serious foreign policy for a serious country. But the secretary of state does not really rate sympathy. For he bears a large, probably the largest, share of responsibility over recent years for an American attitude of bluster, of concern for masculinity in foreign affairs.

The macho image has always been important in Kissinger's approach to international relations: You have to look tough if you want the world to respect you. That was the message a year ago in the hasty assault on Cambodia when the Mayaguez was seized. It is the message now in the heavily-freighted warnings to Cuba of what may happen if she uses troops in Africa again — warnings that even right-wing commentators find puzzling.

But the great expression of the masculinity theme was, of course, Vietnam. As Kissinger took office in 1969, Foreign Affairs published an article of his saying that the crucial necessity in settling the war was to avoid letting the United States be seen to lose. However Americans got to Vietnam, he said, we were there, and for the sake of our position in the world, we had to leave on our terms.

In office, Kissinger followed that policy remorselessly. The test of American credibilty became, for him, the survival of Nguyen Van Thieu in Saigon. To that end, he and President Nixon greatly enlarged the war, bombing Cambodian society. They bombed Hanoi at Christmas, 1972, in one last spasm evidently designed to demonstrate strength as a truce was signed.

Then last year, as the Thieu government approached its inevitable end, Kissinger wailed that the world would never believe us if we did not once again come to the rescue. He and President Ford called urgently on Congress to send nearly another $1 billion in arms to South Vietnam. Kissinger went to the extreme of advertising the end in Vietnam as proof of American weakness.

When a country's leaders talk constantly about the fear of looking "weak," when they draw lines in the most inconvenient corners of the earth and declare that they are the tests of national manhood, is it any wonder if the public begins to worry?

The role of wise political leadership is to help countries, like individuals, grow up. Only children and incomplete adults think that life is a continuous test of "strength" — and think that one side must always prevail.

Henry Kissinger is plainly thinking about the verdict of history these days, but he is too late. He spent six years urging his country to fight history in Vietnam, instead of accepting it with grace and maturity. The cost was terrible, and it is not yet paid.

Man With A Hoe

JACK ANDERSON

Migrant Worker' Plight

WASHINGTON — In a series of stark reports from Florida, we recently described the plight of the stoop laborers who toil under the hot sun in sandy, snake-infested fields.

The reports were based on the experiences of our reporter, Hal Bernton, who posed as a drifter and infiltrated into a migrant crew. He spent a week in the fields, picking tomatoes for a penny a pound.

Bernton found that the migrant workers in his camp earned barely enough to pay, day by day, for three tasteless meals, a filthy mattress to sleep on and wine to dull their aches. Most of them, unable to pick crops fast enough to keep up with the charges deducted from their paychecks, lived in virtual bondage.

Bernton labored for the corporate farming empire of A. Duda and Sons. He stayed in a depressing camp — row after row of battered old trailers upon a parched, sandy site barren except for scattered wine bottles and tin cans. Each trailer was divided into four cramped compartments. He shared a tiny room with a bleary companion who lurched around at night. The room was streaked with grime and stank of urine.

In response to our reports, we have been deluged with letters from concerned Americans wanting to know what the government is doing to help the migrant workers. Sad to say, the politicians are more concerned about pleasing the corporate growers who pass out campaign contributions than in helping the downtrodden pickers who have no money to contribute.

Our reports caused only a passing stir inside the Labor Dept., which is supposed to protect the migrant workers. Apprehensive officials met behind closed doors to discuss how they should respond to our charges.

One official, Fred Romero, implored his colleagues to crack down on the corporate farms that make life miserable for the migrants. But his pleas, according to inside sources, were disregarded.

Instead, the meeting developed into a strategy session not to help the exploited workers but, as one source put it, "to prevent Jack Anderson from hitting the Labor Dept."

We have some advice for the Labor Dept. Just stop neglecting the migrant farm hands. They are the nation's most underpaid, undernourished, underprivileged people. The Labor Dept. is supposed to enforce minimum working standards.

W. J. Usery Jr., the new labor secretary, has assigned the lowest priorities to the workers with the greatest needs. He has actually cut back programs to help the nomadic field hands. Here are the inside details:

— The faceless children who are born into the migrant camps have one way out. Educational programs are supposed to be made available to help them to acquire job skills and qualify for college. One document, intended for the eyes only of Labor Dept. officials, reports that these programs "have proved almost 100% effective" in reducing the dependence of these youngsters "on migrant labor as their chief source of income." Yet Asst. Labor Secy. William Kolberg wants to cut out federal programs for migrant education. Secretary Usery has just agreed to kill some of the programs.

— Most migrant farm laborers live in shabby slum camps which, theoretically, are supposed to meet minimum federal standards. But the Labor Dept.'s inspectors have shown little enthusiasm for upholding the standards.

More often than not, they conduct haphazard inspections or merely accept the assurance of the growers that the housing is adequate. Now Labor Dept. officials are actually considering a proposal to lower the standards.

— Many corporate growers would rather hire foreign workers, usually Jamaicans, who will work for lower wages and accept worse living conditions than native Americans. But under federal law, foreign workers can only be hired if American labor is not available. The growers circumvent the law by advertising for workers while the Americans are on the move between crops. The Labor Dept. is fully aware of this bit of chicanery. Yet the department shuts its eyes and certifies thousands of Jamaicans every summer.

— Sen. James Eastland, D-Miss., the dean of the Senate, is against most of the legislation that passes over his desk. He uses his enormous power to kill laws, stall appointments and bog down the Senate when it tries to override him. But he is pushing one piece of legislation which would make it easier for the corporate farms to hire foreign workers. Eastland has his own farm, complete with a plantation house, back in Sunflower County, Miss. But his office insists he uses no foreign labor on his 5,800 acres.

The streams of migrant farm laborers flow through the nation like human highways, meanwhile, skirting the metropolitan areas and cutting through the fields. Agricultural areas plead for their services when there is picking to be done, then pressure them to move on lest they tap the welfare coffers and burden the schools with their children. Even the Labor Dept., which is supposed to help the workers, is on the side of the growers.

Patchwork Prairie Country

A magazine article caught my eye. Pictures made the article doubly interesting. "What To Do With Old Newspapers" made so many suggestions that as I read through the column, I was tempted to make a basket much like a half-bushel basket with the next daily paper. Making a coffee table seemed to be a bit like work.

As I pondered the situation, I began to ask myself, "What to do with old news?"

For instance: What happened to the twelve-dollar-a-bushel soybeans that made headlines when grain prices were rising some months ago? Although many farmers doubted the news they read, it made good reading.

Last autumn a scientist predicted that our winters were getting colder and the upcoming winter was to be very severe. So what happened? We had one of the mildest winters on record. At best predicting weather is rather risky.

Howard Hughes was reported to have been very ill and died a couple of years ago.

The mayor of New York City reported the economy of his city was as stable as other cities and so continued to go further into debt. It must have been quite a shock to the citizens some time later when they found out they were floundering in economic chaos.

I suspect that making something useful out of old newspapers will not materialize just as the news headlines did not come to pass.

The two old-fashioned roses I ordered arrived in good planting condition and were hustled into the ground. Hopefully they will grow and thrive for many years. I have yet to get the old-fashioned yellow rose that grew in my grandmother's garden on the farm. It stood along the fence in the front yard and bloomed in a most glorious manner.

On a balmy spring day I could smell the roses throughout the big front yard that swept toward the road from the house. It was good just to stand and sniff the roses but best of all, I liked to pick a big bunch of them and bury my face deep in the bouquet.

At that time Heaven was a big garden of yellow roses. As I grew older my idea of Heaven changed from a rose garden to lilac bowery. At one time I thought nothing could be more perfectly scented than the lilac. Since those early years I have come to like the orchard when the apple trees are laden with delicate pink blooms, heady with the scent of flowers.

Picturesque Portraits I would like to frame for the keeping:

The bright full moon lighting the sky when night's peace has stilled the clamor of the day.

The gull with strong silver wings dipping in sudden sportive glee.

A prickle of light on the dark surface of water as it slides over a stony ledge.

The three little kittens making their grand entrance into the farmyard on shaky legs that know not where they go.

The mother cat that coaxes them along step by step to a safer haven under the porch.

Violets blooming through the zig-zag cracks of the old sidewalk.

Children swinging in the school yard, screaming as if they suddenly had taken flight into the wide blue sky.

Me, wishing I could join them "up in the air and over the wall 'till I could see so wide," as the old poem, "The Swing," promised.

Finance Charge Heavy

Pawnee City, Neb.

In the Monday, April 19 issue, The Star had an article on soaring medical costs written by Richard L. Worsnop.

I just want to say, I don't mind paying the actual cost of the medical expense as much as being charged a finance charge each month. I think this is really a low blow for the middle-income people who have a family.

Last July, I had a minor surgery done and went home and had some complications set in and had to be admitted to our local hospital. That started out as two hospital bills plus two doctors' bills. Then eight weeks later, Sept. 24, the doctor in Lincoln called and said I should have major surgery so I did and then again complications. I ended up with three separate hospital bills and three doctor bills. Finally in March of this year, by my request, the hospital in Lincoln combined our two bills and is charging only one finance charge. I'm trying to send in $40.00 a month to them and something to the three other places, which is impossible. Only about $25 of that payment goes on the actual bill while the rest goes on finance charge.

Even with a payment sent in, we get a friendly reminder from our doctor in Lincoln our bill is overdue. Thank God, our local hospital and doctors are going along with us.

I have two children at home, but I still went to work to help my husband make ends meet, which they don't, and to pay our $1,700.00 medical bills for 13 days of care and after our insurance paid over $1,000.00 of it.

Where do married couples get help for this kind of expense? When do we mothers get a break so we can stay at home with our children and still have something? Why should we have to pay a finance charge on medical expenses when they are already making a killing off of us?

Street Action Plan

Lincoln, Neb.

Today, with the Lincoln street action plan, citizens are assured of early participation in street planning.

Of course, the more people involved delays construction, but the plan has not gone through a complete cycle, so when the Public Works Department with the street action plan is coordinated, projects will continue in an orderly manner or process.

How can anyone abandon a plan before it is given a chance to prove it can work?

How many man-hours went into this procedure? Twenty-five citizens, Bob Obering, director of public works, and many of his staff and the staff of the State Roads Department all worked diligently with much thought and with unbelievable cooperation to finalize Lincoln's street action plan.

If Lincoln, Nebraska, is unique in formulating and adopting the street action plan because the mayor and the City Council felt the need, how can we abolish this plan?

If participation in plans for our city is not the concern of the citizens, tell me — what is democracy?

Response To A Need

Lincoln, Neb.

"Today's Mail", April 7, carried a letter from David Trupp calling S.1 (the bill to revise and codify the Federal Criminal Code) "a hideous proposal" which would result in "essentially a police state".

Anyone who takes the time to read the bill and learn its substance and history, would find among other things:

(1) About 95% of the bill consists of non-controversial provisions of present law, arranged in logical order in clear terms, rid of duplication and inconsistencies.

(2) The remaining 5% of the bill consists of considered efforts to improve present law, after careful processing through the past 10 years by responsible bodies composed of judges, lawyers, members of Congress and professors of law. Authors of the bill have agreed to omit some of these items where disagreement threatened to delay the long-needed bulk of the bill. These items could be proposed later in separate bills. If rejected by Congress, that would be it. If approved, they would become law. This is democracy in action.

On this basis, S.1 has the approval of the American Bar Association, the administration, many scholars of the law, and of a clear majority of the Commission to Revise the Criminal Code, leaders of which are former California Governor Pat Brown and retired Justice of the Supreme Court Tom Clark, both highly respected.

It does not stand to reason that any of these would propose or favor "a hideous proposal to establish a police state".

The bill is a response to a vital need, long felt, that the 200-year-old patchwork of criminal law should be vastly improved and modernized. Clearly, it should go to the floor of the Senate and later to the House for debate and vote.

Kissinger went to the extreme of advertising the end in Vietnam as proof of American weakness.

When a country's leaders talk constantly about the fear of looking "weak," when they draw lines in the most inconvenient corners of the earth and declare that they are the tests of national manhood, is it any wonder if the public begins to worry?

The role of wise political leadership is to help countries, like individuals, grow up. Only children and incomplete adults think that life is a continuous test of "strength" — and think that one side must always prevail.

Henry Kissinger is plainly thinking about the verdict of history these days, but he is too late. He spent six years urging his country to fight history in Vietnam, instead of accepting it with grace and maturity. The cost was terrible, and it is not yet paid.

Man With A Hoe

Migrant Worker' Plight

WASHINGTON — In a series of stark reports from Florida, we recently described the plight of the stoop laborers who toil under the hot sun in sandy, snake-infested fields.

The reports were based on the experiences of our reporter, Hal Bernton, who posed as a drifter and infiltrated into a migrant crew. He spent a week in the fields, picking tomatoes for a penny a pound.

Bernton found that the migrant workers in his camp earned barely enough to pay, day by day, for three tasteless meals, a filthy mattress to sleep on and wine to dull their aches. Most of them, unable to pick crops fast enough to keep up with the charges deducted from their paychecks, lived in virtual bondage.

Bernton labored for the corporate farming empire of A. Duda and Sons. He stayed in a depressing camp — row after row of battered old trailers upon a parched, sandy site barren except for scattered wine bottles and tin cans. Each trailer was divided into four cramped compartments. He shared a tiny room with a bleary companion who lurched around at night. The room was streaked with grime and stank of urine.

In response to our reports, we have been deluged with letters from concerned Americans wanting to know what the government is doing to help the migrant workers. Sad to say, the politicians are more concerned about pleasing the corporate growers who pass out campaign contributions than in helping the downtrodden pickers who have no money to contribute.

Our reports caused only a passing stir inside the Labor Dept., which is supposed to protect the migrant workers. Apprehensive officials met behind closed doors to discuss how they should respond to our charges.

One official, Fred Romero, implored his colleagues to crack down on the corporate farms that make life miserable for the migrants. But his pleas, according to inside sources, were disregarded.

Instead, the meeting developed into a strategy session not to help the exploited workers but, as one source put it, "to prevent Jack Anderson from hitting the Labor Dept."

We have some advice for the Labor Dept. Just stop neglecting the migrant farm hands. They are the nation's most underpaid, undernourished, underprivileged people. The Labor Dept. is supposed to enforce minimum working standards.

W. J. Usery Jr., the new labor secretary, has assigned the lowest priorities to the workers with the greatest needs. He has actually cut back programs to help the nomadic field hands. Here are the inside details:

— The faceless children who are born into the migrant camps have one way out. Educational programs are supposed to be made available to help them to acquire job skills and qualify for college. One document, intended for the eyes only of Labor Dept. officials, reports that these programs "have proved almost 100% effective" in reducing the dependence of these youngsters "on migrant labor as their chief source of income." Yet Asst. Labor Secy. William Kolberg wants to cut out federal programs for migrant education. Secretary Usery has just agreed to kill some of the programs.

— Most migrant farm laborers live in shabby slum camps which, theoretically, are supposed to meet minimum federal standards. But the Labor Dept.'s inspectors have shown little enthusiasm for upholding the standards.

More often than not, they conduct haphazard inspections or merely accept the assurance of the growers that the housing is adequate. Now Labor Dept. officials are actually considering a proposal to lower the standards.

— Many corporate growers would rather hire foreign workers, usually Jamaicans, who will work for lower wages and accept worse living conditions than native Americans. But under federal law, foreign workers can only be hired if American labor is not available. The growers circumvent the law by advertising for workers while the Americans are on the move between crops. The Labor Dept. is fully aware of this bit of chicanery. Yet the department shuts its eyes and certifies thousands of Jamaicans every summer.

— Sen. James Eastland, D-Miss., the dean of the Senate, is against most of the legislation that passes over his desk. He uses his enormous power to kill laws, stall appointments and bog down the Senate when it tries to override him. But he is pushing one piece of legislation which would make it easier for the corporate farms to hire foreign workers. Eastland has his own farm, complete with a plantation house, back in Sunflower County, Miss. But his office insists he uses no foreign labor on his 5,800 acres.

The streams of migrant farm laborers flow through the nation like human highways, meanwhile, skirting the metropolitan areas and cutting through the fields. Agricultural areas plead for their services when there is picking to be done, then pressure them to move on lest they tap the welfare coffers and burden the schools with their children. Even the Labor Dept., which is supposed to help the workers, is on the side of the growers.

LA VERNA HASSLER

A magazine article caught my eye. Pictures made the article doubly interesting. "What To Do With Old Newspapers" made so many suggestions that as I read through the column, I was tempted to make a basket much like a half-bushel basket with the next daily paper. Making a coffee table seemed to be a bit like work.

As I pondered the situation, I began to ask myself, "What to do with old news?"

For instance: What happened to the twelve-dollar-a-bushel soybeans that made headlines when grain prices were rising some months ago? Although many farmers doubted the news they read, it made good reading.

Last autumn a scientist predicted that our winters were getting colder and the upcoming winter was to be very severe. So what happened? We had one of the mildest winters on record. At best, predicting weather is rather risky.

Howard Hughes was reported to have been very ill and died a couple of years ago.

The mayor of New York City reported the economy of his city was as stable as other cities and so continued to go further into debt. It must have been quite a shock to the citizens some time later when they found out they were floundering in economic chaos.

I suspect that making something useful out of old newspapers will not materialize just as the news headlines did not come to pass.

The two old-fashioned roses I ordered arrived in good planting condition and were hustled into the ground. Hopefully they will grow and thrive for many years. I have yet to get the old-fashioned yellow rose that grew in my grandmother's garden on the farm. It stood along the fence in the front yard and bloomed in a most glorious manner.

On a balmy spring day I could smell the roses throughout the big front yard that swept toward the road from the house. It was good just to stand and sniff the roses but best of all, I liked to pick a big bunch of them and bury my face deep in the bouquet.

At that time Heaven was a big garden of yellow roses. As I grew older my idea of Heaven changed from a rose garden to lilac bowery. At one time I thought nothing could be more perfectly scented than the lilac. Since those early years I have come to like the orchard when the apple trees are laden with delicate pink blooms, heady with the scent of flowers.

Picturesque Portraits I would like to frame for the keeping:

The bright full moon lighting the sky when night's peace has stilled the clamor of the day.

The gull with strong silver wings dipping in sudden sportive glee.

A prickle of light on the dark surface of water as it slides over a stony ledge.

The three little kittens making their grand entrance into the farmyard on shaky legs that know not where they go.

The mother cat that coaxes them along step by step to a safer haven under the porch.

Violets blooming through the zig-zag cracks of the old sidewalk.

Children swinging in the school yard, screaming as if they suddenly had taken flight into the wide blue sky.

Me, wishing I could join them "up in the air and over the wall 'till I could see so wide," as the old poem, "The Swing," promised.

Finance Charge Heavy

Pawnee City, Neb.

In the Monday, April 19 issue, The Star had an article on soaring medical costs written by Richard L. Worsnop.

I just want to say, I don't mind paying the actual cost of the medical expense as much as being charged a finance charge each month. I think this is really a low blow for the middle-income people who have a family.

Last July, I had a minor surgery done and went home and had some complications set in and had to be admitted to our local hospital. That started out as two hospital bills plus two doctors' bills. Then eight weeks later, Sept. 24, the doctor in Lincoln called and said I should have major surgery so I did and then again complications. I ended up with three separate hospital bills and three doctor bills. Finally in March of this year, by my request, the hospital in Lincoln combined our two bills and is charging only one finance charge. I'm trying to send in $40.00 a month to them and something to the three other places, which is impossible. Only about $25 of that payment goes on the actual bill while the rest goes on finance charge.

Even with a payment sent in, we get a friendly reminder from our doctor in Lincoln our bill is overdue. Thank God, our local hospital and doctors are going along with us.

I have two children at home, but I still went to work to help my husband make ends meet, which they don't, and to pay our $1,700.00 medical bills for 13 days of care and after our insurance paid over $1,000.00 of it.

Where do married couples get help for this kind of expense? When do we mothers get a break so we can stay at home with our children and still have something? Why should we have to pay a finance charge on medical expenses when they are already making a killing off of us?

Street Action Plan

Lincoln, Neb.

Today, with the Lincoln street action plan, citizens are assured of early participation in street planning.

Of course, the more people involved delays construction, but the plan has not gone through a complete cycle, so when the Public Works Department with the street action plan is coordinated, projects will continue in an orderly manner or process.

How can anyone abandon a plan before it is given a chance to prove it can work?

How many man-hours went into this procedure? Twenty-five citizens, Bob Obering, director of public works, and many of his staff and the staff of the State Roads Department all worked diligently with much thought and with unbelievable cooperation to finalize Lincoln's street action plan.

If Lincoln, Nebraska, is unique in formulating and adopting the street action plan because the mayor and the City Council felt the need, how can we abolish this plan?

If participation in plans for our city is not the concern of the citizens, tell me — what is democracy?

Response To A Need

Lincoln, Neb.

"Today's Mail", April 7, carried a letter from David Trupp calling S.1 (the bill to revise and codify the Federal Criminal Code) "a hideous proposal" which would result in "essentially a police state".

Anyone who takes the time to read the bill and learn its substance and history, would find among other things:

(1) About 95% of the bill consists of non-controversial provisions of present law, arranged in logical order in clear terms, rid of duplication and inconsistencies.

(2) The remaining 5% of the bill consists of considered efforts to improve present law, after careful processing through the past 10 years by responsible bodies composed of judges, lawyers, members of Congress and professors of law. Authors of the bill have agreed to omit some of these items where disagreement threatened to delay the long-needed bulk of the bill. These items could be proposed later in separate bills. If rejected by Congress, that would be it. If approved, they would become law. This is democracy in action.

On this basis, S.1 has the approval of the American Bar Association, the administration, many scholars of the law, and of a clear majority of the Commission to Revise the Criminal Code, leaders of which are former California Governor Pat Brown and retired Justice of the Supreme Court Tom Clark, both highly respected.

It does not stand to reason that any of these would propose or favor "a hideous proposal to establish a police state".

The bill is a response to a vital need, long felt, that the 200-year-old patchwork of criminal law should be vastly improved and modernized. Clearly, it should go to the floor of the Senate and later to the House for debate and vote.

Governors Delay Vet School Plan

Cheyenne, Wyo. (AP) — Action has been delayed on a proposed regional college of veterinary medicine that would serve the five states in the Old West Regional Commission.

Governors from Wyoming, Nebraska, South Dakota and North Dakota, along with a representative of Montana Gov. Thomas Judge, took no further formal action on the proposal at a meeting Tuesday.

Nebraska Gov. J. J. Exon said his state supports the concept of constructing the school on the Lincoln campus of the University of Nebraska.

But he said the other four commission states haven't given similar formal approval on $490,000 for plans, specifications and legal papers needed for the project, expected to cost about $14 million.

Cost and enrolment quotas would be divided among member states of the federal-state planning commission.

Wyoming Gov. Ed Herschler said he will meet soon with state agency directors and legislative leaders to review the proposal. He indicated Wyoming will make a decision on whether to support the proposal before the commission's next meeting in June.

South Dakota Gov. Richard Kneip said that despite recent news stories, officials in his state are not necessarily, against the project. However, he said, serious questions have been raised, including the need for more veterinarians in the region.

According to North Dakota Gov. Arthur Link, there may be enough veterinarians in the five-state region to care for small animals. But there still is a need for vets who will work on larger animals, he said.

Commission members said they will take up the subject again at their June meeting. Its date and location were not announced.

Wyoming Group Sets Power Plant Hearing

Cheyenne, Wyo. (AP) — The Wyoming Public Service Commission has scheduled an open meeting April 27 on applications for permits for construction of a $1.4-billion power plant near Wheatland.

The PSC held a nine-day hearing in December on the request by the Missouri Basin Power Project (MBPP) for a certificate of public convenience and necessity for construction of the plant.

A spokesman said the December hearing was to gather evidence in the case. The April 27 meeting is to make a decision or to take steps toward developing a final decision.

The spokesman said it is anticipated that "definitive determinations" will result from the meeting but said another meeting might also be held. No witnesses are to be called at the April meeting with only PSC commissioners and staff members taking part in the discussions

The plant is expected to cost nearly $1.2 billion Related transmission facilities would cost another $1.9 million It would supply electricity for consumers in Wyoming and seven other states.

Officials had hoped to begin construction in April but that deadline was delayed because all necessary permits had not been obtained. MBPP hopes to have the first of the three coal-fired, steam electric generating units at the plant operational by January 1980.

MPBB is composed of Tri State Generation and Powder Cooperative of Bismarck, N.D., Missouri Basin Public Power Financing Corp. of Sioux Falls, S.D., Lincoln Electric System of Lincoln, Neb., Heartland Consumers Power District of Madison, S.D., and Wyoming Municipal Power Agency, Inc. of Lusk

Scotts Bluff, Thurston To Have Bilingual Ballot

By United Press International

Scotts Bluff and Thurston Counties in Nebraska will be required to make special election arrangements to comply with Wednesday's Justice Department ruling that elections be held in more than one language.

Secretary of State Allen Beermann said Scotts Bluff County will have its May 11 primary election ballots printed in Spanish and English. Newspaper election notices, sample ballots, election supplies and registration materials also will be printed in Spanish and English, he said.

He said Thurston County contains the Winnebago and Omaha Indian reservations, where the language is oral and not written. He said assistants or interpreters will be assigned to Thurston County precincts to assist Indian voters, since the ballots can not be printed in the Indian language.

Nebraska is among 30 states that must hold elections in more than one language to comply with 1975 amendments to the voting rights act. The act, originally designed to protect black voters from discrimination, was amended last year to extend the protection to all "language minorities."

Beermann said Scotts Bluff and Thurston County officials are prepared to provide the special language arrangements. He said a meeting was held in his office in February with county election officials and representatives of the state attorney general's office.

He said the election language requirements will cause a "moderate increase" in election costs, which include the additional printing and hourly salaries of the assistants and interpreters.

Since county budgets are determined in September, Beermann said, Scotts Bluff and Thurston Counties had not budgeted for the additional election costs.

Beatrice's 'All Faiths Chapel' Finally Finished

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Beatrice — It's taken $238,000 and 11 laborious years, but the Beatrice State Home officially got its "All Faiths Chapel" Wednesday afternoon.

A dedication crowd filled its 185 theater-type seats as well as a wheelchair area for the handicapped persons the chapel is designed to serve. Appropriately, a good many of the guests were Beatrice Kiwanians, the group which launched a fund drive in 1965 and stuck with it until the finish.

Well, practically the finish. There was no hiding the fact at the ceremony that the building still lacks some $16,000 to $18,000 in carpeting, furnishings and air conditioning. But that will come — hopefully much faster than the first few thousand.

Before and after the Wednesday ceremonies by Edward J. Thieman, president of All Faiths Chapel, Inc., since its inception, there was much reminiscing about the extended effort. The patient Thieman insisted he "never was discouraged, knowing we would win out with the Lord's help."

It was that attitude, plus thousands of hours of volunteer work by the retiree and his wife, which recently brought him both local and district Service to Mankind awards from the "rival" Sertoma Club.

"It was Ed alone who kept things alive in those first difficult years," said John Dando, who has served as corporation treasurer throughout.

Small donations accounted for much of the total, although farmer Harvey Mahloch of DeWitt gave $10,000 plus another $30,000 in matching money.

Keith Chambers, whose campaign chairmanship was also a major success factor, said the effort fits a Kiwanis objective of "giving primacy to the human and spiritual, rather than the material values of life."

The dedication program itself featured an address by Pastor Herbert Graening, former BSH chaplain who helped instigate the chapel. Among other participants were Jack Cleavenger, director of public institutions; Supt. M. E. Wyant; and current Chaplain J. Waldo Greer.

Dramatized by exposed beams and well lighted, the chapel sanctuary is fronted by a specially sculpted "Tree of Life" with various religious symbols.

The Beatrice Kiwanis Club, incidentally, also observed its 55th anniversary Wednesday. Special recognition went to Ralph Roszell, a chapel board member and the sole remaining charter member of the club.

An open house for the chapel is scheduled Sunday afternoon from 2 to 4 p.m. Several musical presentations will be interspersed between tours of the building.

Correctional Officer Sues For Old Job

A correctional officer at the State Penitentiary charged Wednesday he was illegally demoted by prison officials who said he was a homosexual and smuggling drugs into the prison.

In a lawsuit filed in Lancaster County District Court, John H. Hawkins claims he was demoted April 1 "without proper cause, provocation, notice of a hearing and without proper reason."

Hawkins contends that prison officials assigned him to tower duty based on "unjust, improper and untrue accusations" that Hawkins was a homosexual and was bringing marijuana into the penitentiary.

Named in the suit are Robert Parratt, penal complex warden; David Watson, the deputy warden, and Joseph Vitek, director of the Department of Correctional Services.

Hawkins claims that Watson said he was being placed on tower duty because of homosexual conduct. Hawkins charges that Parratt said he was sneaking drugs into the penitentiary.

Those charges "were made falsely, without cause and with no evidence," Hawkins says in the lawsuit.

Hawkins said he was told he would be kept off his normal duties until the allegations were resolved.

Hawkins also is asking the court to enjoin prison officials from using unofficial personnel files. Hawkins said those files are illegal and that the two complaints against him were placed in those files. One file is in Watson's office, the suit claims, while the other file is kept at the penitentiary.

He wants the court to reinstate him to his job and to enjoin the prison officials from maintaining those personnel files.

The actions of the officials, the suit alleges, violates state law and the personnel regulations of the state.

Curtis Wants Decision On Platte Bird Refuge Delayed

Washington (UPI) — Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., says he wants a decision delayed on setting aside land along the Platte River for Sandhill cranes and other migratory birds.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife service is seeking approval to purchase river land or acquire easements from landowners to restrict further development along the Platte River.

The Migratory Bird Conservation Commission is scheduled to meet with the Interior Department May 11 to decide on establishing a national wildlife refuge that would encompass 89,000 acres stretching 180 miles along the Platte River from Chapman to Sutherland.

Curtis said any decision on the proposal should be delayed until landowners affected by the proposal have a chance to express their views.

Ak-Sar-Ben Tax Status Challenged

Omaha (AP) — Augut Ross, an Omaha attorney, filed suit in Douglas County District Court Tuesday seeking a court order to place Ak-Sar-Ben on the tax rolls.

Ross asks the court to set aside a decision last month by the Douglas County Board, sitting as the Board of Equalization, granting tax-exempt status to Ak-Sar-Ben.

County Assessor Frank Bemis and the county attorney's office recommended a continuation of Ak-Sar-Ben's tax-exempt status.

Ross contends the Board of Equalization erred because Ak-Sar-Ben is used for "commercial purposes," and food and liquor are sold there during a "substnatial part" of each year, bringing a "very substantial profit" for Ak-Sar-Ben.

Ross contends also that races and "other forms of entertainment" are conducted there for profit, and the property is used for income and profit.

In addition, Ross contends, Ak-Sar-Ben's tax-exempt status is contrary to Nebraska law and the state's constitution.

Named as defendants in the suit are the governors of the Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben, the Ak-Sar-Ben Exposition and the Douglas County Board of Equalization.

Guidelines Don't Apply To Nebraska Stockmen

The Nebraska Department of Environmental Control says the state's livestock waste control program is not affected by recently published federal guidelines.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency published regulations in March for the national pollutant discharge elimination system permit program affecting livestock operations not covered under previous federal guidelines.

The department said some Nebraskans thought the regulations affected their operations, but this is not true.

The department says it was granted federal authority in 1974 to operate the permit program in Nebraska, so state regulations take precedence over federal ones.

State law prohibits the discharge of pollutants from livestock operations into waters. Runoff from rain or snow must be controlled by July 1, 1977.

If a Nebraska operator has a discharge or potential discharge, he must apply to the department for a permit by Sept. 1.

Public Views On Westview Are Solicited

A public hearing on the future of the Westview Home will be held Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Lancaster County Commissioners hearing room in the County-City Building

The Monday evening hearing was scheduled to give more working people an opportunity to voice views on the recommended closing of the home this spring, said Commissioner Bob Colin.

The committee has recommended that the county close the home, the former poor farm, and place the current residents in nursing homes or group homes within the county.

The commissioners will also allow public comments during the Tuesday afternoon board meeting before they make a decision on the future of the home, located about seven miles north of Lincoln.

The home has housed a variety of people in the past, including indigents, retarded adults, alcoholics and people discharged from the regional center.

LOMR Wins Preliminary Budget Okay

The Lancaster County Board gave tentative approval to a $1,735,220 budget for the Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation (LOMR) during a Wednesday budget hearing.

The total budget is up $95,320 from this year's estimated expenditures. But the county's $275,210 share of the cost is down more than $60,000, said Chairman Bruce Hamilton.

Both federal and state tax funds make up a substantial part of the LOMR annual budget.

The board has not started the search for a new director to replace Bob Smith, who has resigned effective in June, according to Commissioner Jan Gauger.

The board is first taking a close look at the administrative structure before making any hiring decisions, she said.

Ak-Sar-Ben Donated $782,623

Omaha (AP) — Programs ranging from agriculture to Omaha's Henry Doorly Zoo were recipients of aid from Ak-Sar-Ben during 1975. Ak-Sar-Ben's annual report states that $782,623 was spent in the form of direct contributions, grants and awards to a number of agricultural, civic and educational projects, including donated services and facilities. Proceeds from Ak-Sar-Ben's annual thoroughbred race meet provided the major share of the funding spent. Additionally, a record $3,335,188 in parimutuel taxes went into the state's coffers along with more than $112,000 in state admissions taxes, which was collected for eligible county fair programs statewide.

Also approved was an agreement with Midwest Research Institute of Kansas City, Mo., for a $93,800 study of the plant's environmental impact.

Gasohol Project Backed Now

Nebraska's gasahol program administrator Charles Fricke has changed his tune about the support the program is getting from the state's congressional delegation.

Just one month ago, Fricke charged that the five members of the delegation were neglecting the program.

Following a trip to Washington, Fricke charged that Rep. Charles Thone of Lincoln "wants to dump the gasohol activity into Congresswoman Virginia Smith's lap and be rid of it."

Fricke's allegations brought a sharp rebuttal from Sen. Roman Hruska.

"Your ill-conceived comments about the Nebraska congressional delegation are not a helpful way to solicit support for the gasohol program," Hruska said in a letter to Fricke.

Fricke now believes the congressional delegation has done an about-face.

Fricke said he is convinced the delegation has acknowledged the need for a demonstration gasohol project in Nebraska to produce motor fuel from a mixture of grain alcohol and gasoline.

"I think just from their personal communication with me . . . they have agreed to study the gasohol program more closely now and have promised to support it and work on it," Fricke said Wednesday.

Fricke believes the new-found support from the all-Republican delegation is "all we've ever asked for," and added that he hopes the support will continue.

Alliance Teachers, Board Deadlocked

Alliance (AP) — Negotiators for the Alliance Board of Education and the Alliance Education Association, which represents the nearly 100 teachers in the school district, have reached an impasse in negotiations on 1976-77 teacher contracts.

The fly in the ointment is the issue of base salary increases, and the two sides are $180 apart.

The school board has made a "final offer" of $8,300 for a base salary, while the teachers are seeking $8,480.

School board negotiators said, following Tuesday night's bargaining session, that their offer would mean an average pay hike of about $500 for each teacher in the district.

All other terms of the proposed new contract have been settled.

The deadlock is a first between the teachers and the board here and the next step will be to appoint a mediating committee to try to settle the dispute If those attempts are unsuccessful, the case will go to the State Court of Industrial Relations.

Summer Jobs Funded

Kansas City (AP) — The U.S. Labor Department announced Wednesday the allocation of nearly $23.5 million for summer jobs for young people in Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska.

Richard G. Miskimins, head of the department's employment and training administration for the four states, said the money will allow about the same number of summer jobs as last year.

He said summer program participants, who are paid at least the federal minimum wage of $2.30 an hour, must be between 14 and 21 and be economically disadvantaged.

Nebraska will receive $3.3 million of the allocation with Omaha due to get $1,295,191, Lincoln, $288,577, and the balance of Nebraska $1,690,407

Summer Jobs Funded

Kansas City (AP) — The U.S. Labor Department announced Wednesday the allocation of nearly $23.5 million for summer jobs for young people in Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska.

Richard G. Miskimins, head of the department's employment and training administration for the four states, said the money will allow about the same number of summer jobs as last year.

He said summer program participants, who are paid at least the federal minimum wage of $2.30 an hour, must be between 14 and 21 and be economically disadvantaged.

Nebraska will receive $3.3 million of the allocation with Omaha due to get $1,295,191, Lincoln, $288,577, and the balance of Nebraska $1,690,407.

Juror Cecava Excused In Peery Murder Trial

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

Testimony was interrupted Wednesday in the trial of Wesley H. Peery after a juror who has listened to eight days of testimony asked to be excused.

Juror Mary Ann Cecava, of 1911 N. 60th, was replaced by Alfred Heiden, one of two alternate jurors who have also been listeneing to all the testimony.

The reason Mrs. Cecava asked to be excused was not immediately made clear.

There was an unconfirmed report, however, that Mrs. Cecava became convinced during the course of the trial that she had once come into possession of a coin identical to those taken from the Mitzner Rare Coin Shop, at 6106 Havelock.

Reddish-Blue Coins

Kenneth Mitzner, owner of the coin shop and husband of Marianne Mitzner, who was found shot to death in the shop on June 6, 1975, had testified Tuesday that he cleaned his coins ultrasonically and lacquered them, which he said gave them a reddish-blue rainbow effect."

A person who asked not to be identified said Mrs. Cecava had come into possession of the coin when it was given to her as lunch money in a school cafeteria.

Because of that, Mrs. Cecava felt she would be prejudiced in the case and asked to be excused, the spokesman said.

Lancaster County Atty. Ron Lahners, defense attorney Stan Cohen and Mrs. Cecava all refused to comment on the matter. When asked to comment on the rumor, Judge Dale Farhnbruch said he would not comment "one way or another."

The rest of the jury was told only that Mrs. Cecava had a problem "of a personal nature." Judge Fahrnbruch told the jury not to "draw inferences one way or another from this."

Fahrnbruch said that it is not unusual for a juror to be excused from a trial for personal reasons and that is one reason why alternate jurors are selected.

The issue resulted in the entire morning of testimony being canceled in the case as Fahrnbruch, the juror and attorneys conferred in his chambers.

Lacquer On Coins

In other testimony Wednesday John L. Dietrich, a forensic chemist with the State Crime Laboratory, said that he found lacquer on coins found in a pop machine at the Villager Motel, a purse belonging to Mary Blazek, who shared Peery's apartment, and in Peery's toolbox, found in her apartment.

Dietrich said he tested the lacquer in a device using infra-red rays and concluded that the lacquer was identical in composition to that used on coins in the Mitzner Coin Shop.

Dietrich said he also found traces of cooper, zinc and lead in the red rag found in the coin shop and in a file found among Peery's tools.

Dietrich testified that the elements are found in brass, particularly machineable brass like that used in locks.

Peery worked on locks at Nebraska Wesleyan, his supervisor, Darwin Penrod, testified Wednesday. Penrod said he got along "very well" with Peery and that Feery did a good job at Nebraska Wesleyan.

Dietrich also testified that the cotton-polyester fabric and weave of the red rag were identical to that in other rags in the area where Peery worked at Nebraska Wesleyan.

Dietrich said, however, that he could not conclusively say that cord used to bind Mrs. Mitzner was from the same source as cord also found where Peery worked.

Dyas Campaign Manager Seeks More Contributions

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Although his campaign finance efforts are far ahead of 1974, Hess Dyas needs to raise at least $30,000 more in the next three weeks to complete his primary election plans.

Dyas is locked in what appears to be a tight Democratic primary battle with Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky for the U.S. Senate nomination.

In order to win, he must capture the undecided vote in the First and Third Congressional Districts, while chipping away at Zorinsky's strength in the Second District, campaign manager Dick Kurtenbach said Wednesday.

That he hopes to do through a $35,000 media budget.

'Media Is Key'

"The media is the key to pulling the undecideds our way," Kurtenbach said, and that's why an urgent call has gone out to Dyas contributors to give one more time.

At this time in 1974, when Dyas was undertaking a congressional campaign in the First District, he had raised about $30,000, Kurtenbach said.

This year, for the Senate race, the current figure is about $64,000, he noted.

But this time, Dyas faces a tough primary contest, and is conducting a statewide campaign.

Must Win Third

Zorinsky has established support in the Omaha-dominated Second District. And, in order to overcome it, Kurtenbach said, Dyas must build on his established support in the First District and win the Third.

More than 1,500 persons have contributed to the Dyas campaign.

"I think the campaign finance reports clearly show who has the statewide base," Kurtenbach noted.

"We've been extremely happy with the response — but it's awfully hard work."

Dyas fund-raising efforts will now bump into party solicitations for the May 7 Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner, a fund-raising event whose ticket price has risen to $55.

'It'll Be Scramble'

"It'll be a scramble, but we'll make it," Kurtenbach said. "The key will be whether previous contributors will give one more time."

The financial pinch is largely a cash flow problem at the moment, he said.

"We've not had to cut back. But it's a day by day thing. I don't think it's anything we can't handle."

Dyas is aiming for at least 35% of the vote in the Second District, where Zorinsky has scored impressively in Omaha popularity polls.

If he can do that, Dyas can fashion a primary victory with 58% to 60% of the vote in the First and 56% in the Third, Kurtenbach said.

Dyas will have campaigned in more than 300 communities by the end of the month.

Church Trying To Start 'Fires' In State's 'Ignored' 3rd District

Scottsbluff (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church brought his late blooming presidential campaign to the farthest reaches of western Nebraska Wednesday hoping to start "some back fires" against Democratic front-runner Jimmy Carter.

The Idaho Democrat devoted a solid day of campaigning in the ranch and wheat country of Nebraska's 3rd District, an area which his advisors believe is being ignored by other presidential hopefuls.

Nebraska's May 11 primary is the first Church has entered, and he hoped to deliver a message that "the West and Midwest is not going to fall into step" with the other primary results earlier this year.

As he opened his campaign headquarters in Scottsbluff, he told a sidewalk crowd, "Some people say that some candidates have the nomination in the bag, but I don't know who's holding the bag."

Although he did not name Carter, it was an obvious reference and it was a phrase he repeated throughout the day.

Church flew to Scottsbluff Wednesday from Oregon, another state where he pledged his high hopes, and traveled on to Kimball, Sidney and Ogallala later in the day. His three-day western Nebraska campaign tour ends Friday in Lincoln.

He was accompanied by Maxine Morrison, wife of popular former Gov. Frank Morrison.

At various stops Church assured himself a sometime small but nevertheless enthusiastic audience, thanks to bus loads to supporters from Idaho and Lincoln.

He received his warmest reception from a crowd of about 300 in the auditorium of Nebraska Western College in Scottsbluff. The students applauded enthusiastically that Church approves amnesty for Vietnam draft evaders because "I think if Mr. Nixon is entitled to be pardoned, the time has come to say to those young men, 'You have been punished enough. You're welcomed to come home again'."

He received more applause when he said Indians are "the most deprived minority in the United States" and their plight depicts the "bankruptcy" of the present Bureau of Indian Affairs system.

"I am a westerner; I live among them; I would be a sympathetic president," he said.

Douglas Sues To Stop Loan Service

By United Press International

Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas has filed a lawsuit in Lancaster County District Court seeking an order aimed at stopping an Omaha firm from allegedly making false representations about the loan service it operates.

Douglas filed the suit against Western Investors, Inc., of Omaha, which allegedly operates as a loan broker and offers to help persons obtain loans.

The suit said Western Investors specifically offers to locate an individual or lending institution which is ready and willing to make a loan.

It said the firm allegedly charges an advance fee of 1% of the amount of the loan and an additional 2% if a loan is arranged.

The suit said less than 5% of the firm's customers have been successful in obtaining loans. The petition asked for a court order to prevent the firm from falsely representing that it has access to practically unlimited sums of money.

The suit also asked that the court prevent the firm from falsely representing prior to the signing of a contract that customers will not be required to put up collateral to secure loans or to falsely represent that once a contract is signed, the firm will have no trouble in arranging a loan.

In addition, the suit asked that Western Investors be prevented from falsely representing that the advance fee will be returned if the firm is unable to arrange a loan.

Udall Tabs Clergy Chief

The Rev. Dr. J. Andrew Thompson of Omaha has been named chairman of the Clergy for Udall Committee for Nebraska.

The committee will work in behalf of the Democratic presidential candidacy of Congressman Morris Udall of Arizona, a candidate in Nebraska's May 11 primary election.

You Just Can't Keep A 'Toted' Pole In Hiding

A big, bald bird with wings spread wide atop a brightly-painted totem pole could not go long unnoticed.

And so Dwight Williams, who carved the totem pole for a nephew from a used power pole, now has the 13-foot creation back.

A neighbor near Williams' home at 6000 Huntington said she found it in her garage. When she read a newspaper story about the toted totem pole she knew where it belonged.

The perpetrators of the theft have not been identified. Williams said he is just happy to have back the pole, which he handcarved during the winter. He intends to send it to his nephew in Rochester, Minn.

3 Lancaster County Senators Challenged

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Three incumbent state senators from Lancaster County, two of whom are completing their first term in the Unicameral, are facing opposition in the May 11 primary election.

Each of them has at least two opponents in contests which will select only two nominees for a general election showdown next November.

Sen. Shirley Marsh of Lincoln, the only woman member of the Legislature, faces the most primary contenders of any incumbent senator in next month's elections — six of them, all but one of whom are men.

Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly, the dean of Lancaster County's six-member delegation with 14 years of Unicameral service, bumps into two primary opponents.

Youngest Senator

So does Sen. Steve Fowler of Lincoln who, at age 25, is the youngest member of the Legislature.

Fowler represents the 27th District, which encompasses the western precincts of the city.

Mrs. Marsh's 29th District is in southeast Lincoln.

After Fifth Term

Warner, 48, a farmer, was first elected to the Legislature in 1962 and is seeking his fifth term. His father, the late Charles Warner, served 13 terms in the Legislature before he was elected lieutenant governor in 1948.

His son has been a power in the Unicameral (he was Speaker in 1969), and is best known for fathering the current program of state aid to schools and for guiding a massive road financing package to legislative enactment.

Warner's opponents include Reginal Powers, 39, an Elmwood labor union (graphic arts) leader, and Richard Hedrick, 48, a Waverly railroad locomotive engineer.

Powers identifies his chief concern as rising taxes and utility rates.

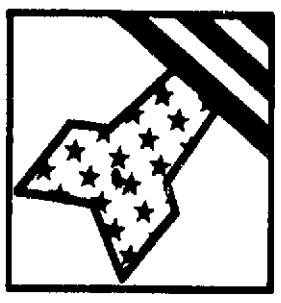
Environmentalist

Fowler, who upset an incumbent senator (William Swanson) in 1972 to win election at the age of 22, has been strongly identified with environmental issues — among them the need for assured safety in nuclear power production and an Oregon-type returnable bottle and container law.

If re-elected, he said, he will seek "greater accountability" in public power and repeal of the sales tax on food.

His opponents include Don Stenberg, 27, an attorney, and Cecil Stanley, 67, former state education commissioner.

Stenberg has called for a comprehensive program of energy conservation and research, an increased homestead tax exemption for senior citizens and expanded agricultural research.



Stanley, who served as education commissioner from 1969 to 1974, wants school reorganization (with no more than 300 resulting school districts), state school aid increased to a level where it funds 40% of operational costs and expanded state support for vocational education.

Mrs. Marsh, 50, whose husband is State Treasurer Frank Marsh, also bounced an incumbent senator (Fern Hubbard Orme) in winning election to the Legislature in 1972.

Her legislative activities have centered on the Appropriations Committee, where she usually votes with the less conservative majority.

Mrs. Marsh looks to child abuse reforms and "further definition of the restricted smoking regulations in public places" as future concerns. It was she who authored the current restrictions on smoking in specified public places.

Among her opponents is one woman, Sandra Kinsey, 31, a businesswoman and housewife who served four years in the legislative fiscal office.

Gas Tax Hike

Mrs. Kinsey favors a one cent per gallon increase in the gasoline tax and curtailment of the "continual escalation" in state spending.

William (Pat) Daugherty, 64, co-owner and manager of a licensed collection agency, has been assistant state tax commissioner, employment division director, state budget officer and chief accountant for the Public Service Commission.

His chief concerns include University of Nebraska appropriations, medical malpractice insurance and capital projects, including the proposed school of veterinary medicine.

Ron Wylie, 30, a free lance reporter, points to the need for accountability in state spending, performance auditing and annual justification for every spending program.

Gerald Sasek, 27, whose business interests include real estate and a food and licensed beverage establishment, was formerly chief engineer for the Public Service Commission.

Cost of Electricity

Sasek would like to attempt to "slow down the increasing costs" of electricity (and ban the use of electric revenue to produce tax money for government coffers), eliminate the sales tax on food and provide more open and visible government.

Robert Hinman, 51, a consulting safety engineer, lists taxes and the need to improve the economy and reduce unemployment as his chief concerns.

Hinman would also keep an eye on state employe working habits.

Daniel Manning, 27, a barber, wants to hold the line on state spending, work to reduce crime and take action to encourage economic development.

Food Retailer Says Stores Sanitary

Russell Raybould, president of the Cornhusker Food Retailers, Wednesday attacked claims that some of Lincoln's grocery stores may not be sanitary.

Raybould, who heads the association of 37 independent and locally owned stores, was responding to a report of two weeks ago that there were several insanitary conditions in grocery stores.

The report was from the Lincoln-Lancaster County Health Department.

Glenn Kreuscher, director of the State Department of Agriculture, has also attacked the report.

Raybould said "the city has no trained bacteriologists, microbiologists, inspectors or personnel trained in operating technical equipment which is not on hand either."

Raybould, of B&R IGA, said that since the State Department of Agriculture already inspects grocery stores and has the expertise to do so, that any duplication by the city's health sanitarians would be a tax burden.

Fire Gear Updated At Hotel

The Cornhusker Hotel, at 301 S. 13th St., has spent about $23,000 in recent months to update its fire safety provisions for hotel staff and guests, according to management.

The improvements include two fire alarm boxes on each floor of the hotel, more than 38 heat detectors throughout the building, three fire bells (for warning) on each floor, and at least 16 new fire doors.

Some remodeling was required, including putting in additional doorways and fire walls where open halls previously existed, particularly around the kitchen area, said Carol Sandberg, hotel controller.

The additional fire protection devices were added after a Feb. 17, 1975, Lincoln Star Column A story listed some fire hazards at the hotel.

But Sandberg and Sales Manager Dick Childs said that the remodeling and additions were required by the fire inspectors.

The improvements are also a service to the people who stay at the hotel, Childs said.

Some of the fire protection equipment has been almost as much trouble as the protection it offers. During state basketball tournaments, seven fire alarms — one on each floor, were all pulled at the same time.

Childs said he believes the 50-year-old building is anything but a fire hazard. "I don't think there's ever been a fire," he said.

"Before I leave, I would like to go upstairs and build a bonfire and see what happens. I don't think the place will burn."

Dairy Unit Chief Elected As Head Of Sanitarians

H. H. Wenant, chief of the State Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Dairies, Foods and Drugs, has been selected president of the Nebraska Board of Registered Sanitarians.

The group's other officers include Ed Edwards, chief sanitarian of the Grand Island-Hall County Health Department, vice president, and Ellis Simmons, chief of radiological health for the State Department of Health, executive secretary-treasurer.

The board reviews and approves the qualifications and licenses of those applying to be registered sanitarians.

City Sells Oddities

Detroit (AP) — Officials of financially strapped Detroit on Wednesday opened a three-day auction billed as the world's largest garage sale, offering items ranging from old fire hydrants to membership in a city zoo adopt-an-animal program.

An estimated 25,000 shoppers roamed through Detroit's Cobo Hall looking over an array of auction items on the first day of the sale.

Bill Austin, curator of the Detroit zoo, was one of dozens of officials taking part. He was in charge of the highly successful adopt-an-animal plan under which people could sponsor animals owned by the city.

Within two hours after the doors opened at 9 a.m. Wednesday, 150 persons had offered to help pay for Rocky, a seven-foot python, Austin said.

But Austin had items people could take home, if the price was right, such as 24 old park benches. He figured they would last a day but they were gone within 15 minutes. When Austin counted his sales slips, he found he had sold two more than he had — so it was off to the zoo to find two more.

The city, hoping to raise thousands of dollars for its depleted treasury, had innumerable oddities for sale, including 1910 claw-foot bathtubs, 1896 ornamental streetlights, old rowboats, three fire engines and five police motorcycles.

Macy Man Charged In Shooting

Omaha (UPI) — A young Macy Indian reservation policeman was charged with involuntary manslaughter Wednesday in the shooting death of a police dispatcher during a card game at police headquarters.

U.S. Magistrate Richard C. Peck continued arraignment proceedings for Walter O. Grant, 24, to give Grant time to decide whether he needs a court appointed attorney.

Grant was taken into custody by the FBI early Wednesday in Macy for the shooting death of Glenn B. Hallowell, 24, Macy. He was released by Peck on a $1,000 unsecured signature bond.

The FBI report on the incident showed Grant and Hallowell were among several persons playing cards at the police station.

Hallowell won at a game of pitch, the FBI said, and Grant then pulled his pistol from its holster, pointed it at Hallowell and fired one round into his chest.

Grant told FBI agents he thought the gun was unloaded and had forgot he placed bullets in it earlier.

Hallowell was taken by ambulance to the hospital in Winnebago where he was subsequently pronounced dead by a physician.

Authorities said Grant and Hallowell were friends, and there was no evidence to indicate the shooting was intentional.

Grant told Peck he didn't plan on returning to Macy "because I don't think I would be safe on the reservation." Grant said he would stay in Omaha with an uncle.

Grant said he had been a policeman since March 29 after serving two months as a teachers aide in the Macy Public Schools. Grant said he had been employed previously in Dallas, Tex. as a counselor at an Indian alcoholism center.

Grant told Peck he graduated from the Walthill High School.

Members of Grant's family arrived from Macy to attend the hearing. Following the proceedings Grant embraced his mother and cried.

Grant faces a maximum penalty of three years in prison and a $1,000 fine.

Bidding Quicker, Higher For Public TV Auction

The bidding is quicker, the bids are generally higher and everything seems to be going beautifully.

That was the opening night assessment of the annual televised auction on Nebraska Educational Television sponsored by the Nebraskans for Public Television, according to general chairman Karen Dahlstrom.

Volunteers from the Seward Jaycees, the Bryan Hospital Service League and the cheerleaders from Lincoln East High School manned the phones which were busy "90% of the time," according to Ms. Dahlstrom.

The auction, which continues for five nights, has over 5,000 volunteers aiding in the efforts to raise money for public television. In addition, 36 towns are represented by official chairmen. Bids have come from all of those towns as well as from the states of Colorado, South Dakota and Wyoming.

Although opening night statistics are hard to analyze, Ms. Dahlstrom said she expects this to be the biggest auction yet.

Couple Accuses Denney Of Negligence

Omaha (UPI) — A Sarpy County couple filed lawsuits Wednesday charging U.S. District Judge Robert V. Denney of Omaha with negligence in connection with a chain-reaction traffic accident four years ago.

Denney said he would have no comment on the suits filed in Douglas County District Court by Edward Lepatourel and his wife Valerie.

The Lepatourels alleged Denney failed to keep his automobile under reasonable and proper control, failed to keep and maintain a "proper lookout," changed his lane of travel abruptly and unsafely, operated his automobile at an unreasonable reate of speed and followed their car too closely.

The May 13, 1972, accident occured on I-80 near the Platte River bridge as Denney, his secretary and his law clerk were en route back to Omaha from North Platte where he had conducted court earlier.

No Ticket Issued

The 60-year-old judge wasn't ticketed by State Patrol investigators.

The U.S. attorney's office said it had received Justice Department approval to defend Denney since the accident occurred while the judge was on official business. Such a procedure is normal for any government employe involved in an accident while on the job, federal attorneys said.

Mrs. Lepatourel, who records show was 45 at the time of the accident, asks for $14,244 in special damages for medical bills and further awards the court may "deem just and equitable."

Mrs. Lepatourel said she has suffered the permanent loss of her left eye, permanent brain damage, a permanent dimunition of both her motor and sensory functional abilities and has sustained "total permanent disability."

In his suit, Lepatourel contends it is impossible for his wife to perform her household duties and afford him the "normal society and companionship" she did before the accident.

Lepatourel asks for no specific damage amount.

Records show Lepatourel was approaching the scene of another accident and his car was in front of Denney's. A third car, driven by Terry R. Ringling of Omaha, smashed into the rear of Denney's car.

The patrol said Denney's car then struck the Lepatourel car with the resulting impact pushing the Lepatourel car into a guard rail and throwing Mrs. Lepatourel into the windshield.

Car Went Into Ditch

Denney's car then left the road, went over a guard railing and landed in a ditch.

Ringling's car came to a stop in the passing lane of the interstate.

Denney told officers at the time he saw Ringling's car "coming up (behind him) fast" before the collision.

Ringling told officers his car was traveling about 70 miles per hour at the time.

Mrs. Lepatourel was the only person involved in the accident who required hospitalization.

Lower Platte South NRD Votes To Retain Current Boundaries

By J.L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

The board of the Lower Platte South Natural Resources District voted Wednesday night to retain the current boundaries of the district, at least for the time being.

That vote, generally thought to favor rural residents, came at the recommendation of a special committee assigned to study changes in the subdistrict boundaries. That same committee voted 3-1 in favor of the same proposal earlier this month.

The dissenting opinion was expressed by board and committee member Dave Landis.

Landis favored redrawing the subs to match the boundaries of the legislative districts, a border which he said would "more closely match the boundaries of the city of Lincoln" and ensure that the districts would maintain urban representation.

Landis noted that his proposal would also represent a more equal distribution of population for the subdistricts since each of the legislative areas has about 31,000 people. Currently, NRD districts may vary from 17,000 to 45,000, he noted.

Secondly, the current borders cross census tracts and are based on streets, in a situation which is subject to change. Thirdly, some savings could be recognized in election costs if the districts conformed to the existing legislative districts.

Lastly, Landis noted the support from the mayor and council, the League of Women Voters and other public interests which, he said, seemed to support the drawing of new districts.

Board member Jack Waggoner, also a member of the special committee, objected to Landis presentation on the grounds that "we've been through all this before." But the chair ruled that Landis could continue before making his motion to adopt the minority report.

That motion was seconded by board member Marie Arnot, but it failed on a 15-3 vote. Arnot, Landis and board member Bruce Kennedy voted in favor of the proposal.

The board then adopted the committee report which stated that things should remain the same with the possibility of a study on the matter before the 1978 election.

The City-County Planning Commission held a hearing Wednesday on the application of the Benedictine Convent of the Sacred Heart to live in a house at 56th and Glade.

The County Board has referred the matter to the planners, since the county has received two requests. Present zoning law prohibits people from moving a trailer onto land for a temporary use.

Couple Accuses Denney Of Negligence

Omaha (UPI) — A Sarpy County couple filed lawsuits Wednesday charging U.S. District Judge Robert V. Denney of Omaha with negligence in connection with a chain-reaction traffic accident four years ago.

Denney said he would have no comment on the suits filed in Douglas County District Court by Edward Lepatourel and his wife Valerie.

The Lepatourels alleged Denney failed to keep his automobile under reasonable and proper control, failed to keep and maintain a "proper lookout," changed his lane of travel abruptly and unsafely, operated his automobile at an unreasonable reate of speed and followed their car too closely.

The May 13, 1972, accident occured on I-80 near the Platte River bridge as Denney, his secretary and his law clerk were en route back to Omaha from North Platte where he had conducted court earlier.

No Ticket Issued

The 60-year-old judge wasn't ticketed by State Patrol investigators.

The U.S. attorney's office said it had received Justice Department approval to defend Denney since the accident occurred while the judge was on official business. Such a procedure is normal for any government employe involved in an accident while on the job, federal attorneys said.

Mrs. Lepatourel, who records show was 45 at the time of the accident, asks for $14,244 in special damages for medical bills and further awards the court may "deem just and equitable."

Mrs. Lepatourel said she has suffered the permanent loss of her left eye, permanent brain damage, a permanent dimunition of both her motor and sensory functional abilities and has sustained "total permanent disability."

In his suit, Lepatourel contends it is impossible for his wife to perform her household duties and afford him the "normal society and companionship" she did before the accident.

Lepatourel asks for no specific damage amount.

Records show Lepatourel was approaching the scene of another accident and his car was in front of Denney's. A third car, driven by Terry R. Ringling of Omaha, smashed into the rear of Denney's car.

The patrol said Denney's car then struck the Lepatourel car with the resulting impact pushing the Lepatourel car into a guard rail and throwing Mrs. Lepatourel into the windshield.

Car Went Into Ditch

Denney's car then left the road, went over a guard railing and landed in a ditch.

Ringling's car came to a stop in the passing lane of the interstate.

Denney told officers at the time he saw Ringling's car "coming up (behind him) fast" before the collision.

Ringling told officers his car was traveling about 70 miles per hour at the time.

Mrs. Lepatourel was the only person involved in the accident who required hospitalization.

Lower Platte South NRD Votes To Retain Current Boundaries

By J.L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

The board of the Lower Platte South Natural Resources District voted Wednesday night to retain the current boundaries of the district, at least for the time being.

That vote, generally thought to favor rural residents, came at the recommendation of a special committee assigned to study changes in the subdistrict boundaries. That same committee voted 3-1 in favor of the same proposal earlier this month.

The dissenting opinion was expressed by board and committee member Dave Landis.

Landis favored redrawing the subs to match the boundaries of the legislative districts, a border which he said would "more closely match the boundaries of the city of Lincoln" and ensure that the districts would maintain urban representation.

Landis noted that his proposal would also represent a more equal distribution of population for the subdistricts since each of the legislative areas has about 31,000 people. Currently, NRD districts may vary from 17,000 to 45,000, he noted.

Secondly, the current borders cross census tracts and are based on streets, in a situation which is subject to change. Thirdly, some savings could be recognized in election costs if the districts conformed to the existing legislative districts.

Lastly, Landis noted the support from the mayor and council, the League of Women Voters and other public interests which, he said, seemed to support the drawing of new districts.

Board member Jack Waggoner, also a member of the special committee, objected to Landis presentation on the grounds that "we've been through all this before." But the chair ruled that Landis could continue before making his motion to adopt the minority report.

That motion was seconded by board member Marie Arnot, but it failed on a 15-3 vote. Arnot, Landis and board member Bruce Kennedy voted in favor of the proposal.

The board then adopted the committee report which stated that things should remain the same with the possibility of a study on the matter before the 1978 election.

Betty Ford Says 'Saturday Night' Skits 'Distasteful'

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (AP) — First Lady Betty Ford said Wednesday that some of the skits seen on NBC's "Saturday Night" television program last weekend were "distasteful.".

The late night show was introduced by President Ford via a pretaped film clip. His press secretary, Ron Nessen, was master of ceremonies. In an airport news conference, Mrs. Ford commented, "I must say I was a little disappointed in some of the skits. I thought they were a little distasteful . . . and so did the President. It was something we would not have had a part in. Although he was not involved in it, it looked like he was endorsing the 'Saturday Night' show. But when he did it, he didn't know what was going to take place."

At one point, Nessen was in a skit with comedian Chevy Chase which poked fun at the President.

Asked if she or the President thought Nessen's role was inappropriate, she replied, "No." She said she objected to one skit which "took place in sort of intimate quarters."

This apparently referred to a bedroom scene in which "Supreme Court justices" were scrutinizing the actions of a couple in bed.

"I thought the White House material was very funny and so did the President," she said. "We both laughed at it and had a good time."

Mrs. Ford was here on a campaign swing through Texas.

Earlier in the week, some White House aides had said the President was displeased with the show, but other aides denied that Ford was upset.

Nessen had said the President had "basically no reaction" and cut off further questions.

CBS Has Record Profits In Quarter

Chicago (AP) — CBS Inc. officials reported Wednesday record profits for the first quarter of 1976.

A proposal that CBS hire an in-house critic "assigned the responsibility of receiving and investigating complaints from the public about unfair or inaccurate progrms" was rejected by secret ballot at the recommendation of the network's management.

Reed Irvine, who presented the proposal on behalf of Accuracy in Media, Inc., a Washington-based organization which holds CBS shares, criticized the network's record on correcting erroneous news reports.

AIM, a group which monitors the news media for accuracy and fairness, proposed that an ombudsman who would have direct access to top CBS management "be allotted time on radio and television to report to the . . . public on action taken about valid complaints."

Speaking against the proposal, chairman William S Paley said CBS News employs more than 1,000 professional journalists who have "achieved and lived up to a very high degree of integrity and of uncompromised independence in carrying out our news function."

Net income was $27 8 million on estimated net sales of $515.7 million in the first three months of 1976, compared to $24 2 million net income on $442.6 million in sales for the same period a year earlier, he said.

He said the figures translated into first-quarter estimated earnings of 97 cents for a share of common stock, up 15% from 84 cents in 1974.

Life Begins At Forty:

Good Health Key To Graceful Aging

By JOANNE FARRIS

What are some of the qualities in old persons that those who are not yet old can learn from? A young reader asks, "What can I do so that I'll be a happy old person?"

The general consensus of opinion seems to be that the most important single contributor to graceful aging is picking the right parents. For one thing, those who live to be old are generally born of parents who attained longevity themselves. And the good health which is the first requirement for a happy old age is built in two principal ways: first by inheritance; second by taking care of one's self.

How does a pre-retiree take care of himself so he'll maximize his potential for a healthy old age? There are many medical caveats, but they all come down to a few simple rules.

First, keep your weight down to a reasonable level, so that you do not put an undue strain on your heart, and so that you decrease as much as possible your chances of getting diabetes.

Second, get regular exercise of a sort which requires your heart and lungs to exert strongly.

Third, if you drink alcoholic beverages, do it in moderation.

Fourth, if you smoke, stop.

I recently attended a medical school seminar on nutrition, longevity and aging. Participants included medical doctors, biologists, physiologists and chemists

They were unanimous in their belief that smoking harms health, and without exception they affirm the importance to longevity of eating in moderation so as to prevent overweight. In fact, animal research indicates that eating less than desired but enough to prevent starvation increases the life span of the test animals.

Once you have done what you can to see that your health needs are taken care of, what are some of the other attributes which mark the person who has aged successfully?

One quality shared by virtually all active old persons is that they are involved; they work at jobs or as volunteers in their communities; they pursue sports or other recreational activities with enthusiasm and on a regular basis; they work at hobbies and have interests which stimulate them mentally and keep them alert and which contributes to their total sense of well-being. Whenever a middle-aged person picks a "model" for old age; that is, a person he would hope to resemble when he becomes old, what does he look for? First, he notices old persons who are vigorous.

Studies at Duke University on a group of persons who have been observed and tested since 1954, which puts the subjects now into their 80s, reveal that all of them work at getting vigorous exercise which includes either strenuous walking or deliberate daily exercise programs.

Many of them are married; none of them has allowed himself or herself to become socially isolated. They participate actively in the life of the community of which they are a part, whether it is business, a new vocation, volunteer work, or hobbies.

They keep their minds active and their skills honed. Most important, they all have fun. And in having fun themselves, they convey their joy to those around them and they in turn have fun, too. Not long ago a reader wrote about the paucity of good laughs to be derived from the current TV fare.

Persons of any age who give free rein to the free child who lives within each of them, make their own fun, produce their own humorous situations or finds things to laugh about as they go through their daily rounds.

Life Begins At Forty:

Good Health Key To Graceful Aging

By JOANNE FARRIS

What are some of the qualities in old persons that those who are not yet old can learn from? A young reader asks, "What can I do so that I'll be a happy old person?"

The general consensus of opinion seems to be that the most important single contributor to graceful aging is picking the right parents. For one thing, those who live to be old are generally born of parents who attained longevity themselves. And the good health which is the first requirement for a happy old age is built in two principal ways: first by inheritance; second by taking care of one's self.

How does a pre-retiree take care of himself so he'll maximize his potential for a healthy old age? There are many medical caveats, but they all come down to a few simple rules.

First, keep your weight down to a reasonable level, so that you do not put an undue strain on your heart, and so that you decrease as much as possible your chances of getting diabetes.

Second, get regular exercise of a sort which requires your heart and lungs to exert strongly.

Third, if you drink alcoholic beverages, do it in moderation.

Fourth, if you smoke, stop.

I recently attended a medical school seminar on nutrition, longevity and aging. Participants included medical doctors, biologists, physiologists and chemists.

They were unanimous in their belief that smoking harms health, and without exception they affirm the importance to longevity of eating in moderation so as to prevent overweight. In fact, animal research indicates that eating less than desired but enough to prevent starvation increases the life span of the test animals.

Once you have done what you can to see that your health needs are taken care of, what are some of the other attributes which mark the person who has aged successfully?

One quality shared by virtually all active old persons is that they are involved; they work at jobs or as volunteers in their communities; they pursue sports or other recreational activities with enthusiasm and on a regular basis; they work at hobbies and have interests which stimulate them mentally and keep them alert and which contributes to their total sense of well-being. Whenever a middle-aged person picks a "model" for old age; that is, a person he would hope to resemble when he becomes old, what does he look for? First, he notices old persons who are vigorous.

Studies at Duke University on a group of persons who have been observed and tested since 1954, which puts the subjects now into their 80s, reveal that all of them work at getting vigorous exercise which includes either strenuous walking or deliberate daily exercise programs.

Many of them are married; none of them has allowed himself or herself to become socially isolated. They participate actively in the life of the community of which they are a part, whether it is business, a new vocation, volunteer work, or hobbies.

They keep their minds active and their skills honed. Most important, they all have fun. And in having fun themselves, they convey their joy to those around them and they in turn have fun, too. Not long ago a reader wrote about the paucity of good laughs to be derived from the current TV fare.

Persons of any age who give free rein to the free child who lives within each of them, make their own fun, produce their own humorous situations or finds things to laugh about as they go through their daily rounds.

Nongardeners

Hate the great outdoors? Get even with those who have greener pastures.

By Jim Moore
Special Contributor

Are you a gardener who — well -- hates to garden? Do you own a lawn and/or garden that s making your life miserable? Are you being enslaved by a plot of earth that irritates, baffles and humbles you?

If so be of good heart The words that follow are written especially for you

Self-Respect

First, my friend let s restore a modicum of self respect to your existence The hate-to-garden ' gardener who lives in the average suburb is snooted and rejected — a forlorn creature who may eventually turn to drink or even move into an apartment

It s been said that a little knowledge can be a dangerous thing This is true And you, my hate-to-garden friend are going to use this saying to change your status in the neighborhood

Write the University of Nebraska Extension Service and ask for a pamphlet on Midwest lawn care Read this quickly, picking out every big word you can find Now you re ready

Saunter over to that neighbor on your block who has the best lawn and start a conversation on any pretext In the midst of this chat stoop down and begin looking for a discolored blade of grass When you ve found one, simply blurt out

Helminthosporium Blight' ' '

Conversation

You ve now baited your hook From this point, the conversation should go something like this in most cases, your neighbor will sputter

Huh? — (gasp') wha wha- what did you say?

I said Helminthosporium Blight I m afraid John, you ve got a slug of ol helmo—

But — but what's that?"

Well John, I hate to be the bearer of sad tidings, but in plain layman s terms, your lawn s got the galloping crud "

' Good grief! What causes that? '

Among other things, John, it s due to what might be called bad cultural practices "

' But how could that be? I do everything I m supposed to I apply preemergent every spring, fertilize twice a year, aerate every two years, power rake both spring and fall What more can I do? '

"Aha! That's precisely what's wrong John "

' What? '

Too Perfect

' Your lawn's too plush — too perfect It s got too tight a thatch You've created precisely the kind of lawn that helmo blight likes best Now, me As you may have noticed I don t use all the, ahem, intense cultural practices that you employ I used to, of course In fact, at our former home I had the finest lawn on the block "

Are you getting the idea?

Of course, the truly avid "hate-to-garden gardener will never stop at this point Equal parts of one-upmanship and intimidation may have restored a little self respect, but if he s to reach those Elysian Fields where laziness and sloth receive their true reward, he must persist

The ' hate-to-garden" gardener will next visit a nursery and buy three plants — euonymus sarcoxie divaricata cotoneaster and polygonium renoutria

(If purchased in small sizes all three will not cost more than $20)

These can be planted anywhere on the property That s not important But what is important is that you invite this same neighbor over to your property You've ' helminthosporium blighted ' him on his grounds Now it s time to euonymussarcoxiedivaricata cotoneasterpolygoniumrenoutria ' him on your grounds

You ve now administered the coup de grace

From this point on you re captain of your own ship — master of your own soul

And now comes the fun — the real fun First of all, you can get rid of that damned Kentucky bluegrass that's been breaking your heart and keeping you on the brink of bankruptcy all these years

Instead you plant Kentucky 31 tall fescue in sunny areas and creeping red fescue or chewing fescue in shady places Fescue is a coarser grass than bluegrass but you're your own man now What do you care? You don t need that effete, narrow-bladed status symbol out there in that front yard any more

Fescue requires little fertilizer It s drouth tolerant heat resistant And — hallelujah' — it doesn t need all that precious, expensive water to keep it going

Buffalo Grass

Other tough, low maintenance grasses that can bring new meaning to your gardening life are buffalo and blue grama Buffalo grass is particularly good in high traffic locations

For example, if you ve got a herd of young, two-legged buffaloes stampeding across your lawn each afternoon as school lets out this particular grass should keep you out of the poor house

And now, dear "hate-to-garden" gardeners, let's turn our attention to that roto-tilled or disced plot of bare ground in the backyard that s been the bane of your existence for years

Not to have a garden these days is — well — unpatriotic What devious plan can we devise to avoid the slurs that would come our way were we not to plant a garden?

First, we should buy a whole bunch of raspberry and blackberry bushes and plant them in a manner so that no true gardener can penetrate our back yard

(In this whole world there's nothing more degrading and demeaning than having a real gardener look down his nose at the puny tomatoes and radishes you ve worked so hard to grow It s like telling a new mother that her dumb kid ain t got his head screwed on quite right)

Renovation Begins

Once our garden has been suitably barricaded with thorns, a renovation should begin For the slothful gardener nothing is better than the so-called small fruits These are rhubarb, asparagus gooseberries, currants etc

Plants should be stuck in the ground, prayed over once and then left to fend for themselves — forever

When an impenetrable thicket results, simply let the word out that you ve finally developed the kind of ' cover you ve wanted for your own personal mid-city wildlife reserve

And now for a few ' hate-to-garden hints

If you re too lazy to pull weeds simply take this newspaper you re reading and place five sheets of it on either side of a row of vegetables Hold these sheets in place with clods of earth

This is particularly effective with leafy vegetables such as spinach lettuce and Swiss chard It ll save hours in removing the dirt from these plants

Black Plastic

In the case of vine crops like watermelon and musk melon black plastic is preferred Not only does this smother weeds but it also holds heat and makes the vine develop faster Of course you must leave some open space to water plants

To be sure that your name will go down in neighborhood history as the gardener s gardener," sprinkle a couple of packets of bush beans and zucchini squash over any other bare ground left in the back yard Of all vegetables these produce the most food with the least effort

Please don t misunderstand These aren t to be eaten No siree' When they ve matured, simply go around the neighborhood giving them away

This is the ultimate in one-upmanship and intimidation You ll be the hero of your block, enshrined in everyone s memory from that day on

Be sure that each and every true gardener in your neighborhood gets at least some of your garden produce

They will of course hate your guts for this but even ' hate-to-garden ' gardeners must bear some kind of a cross

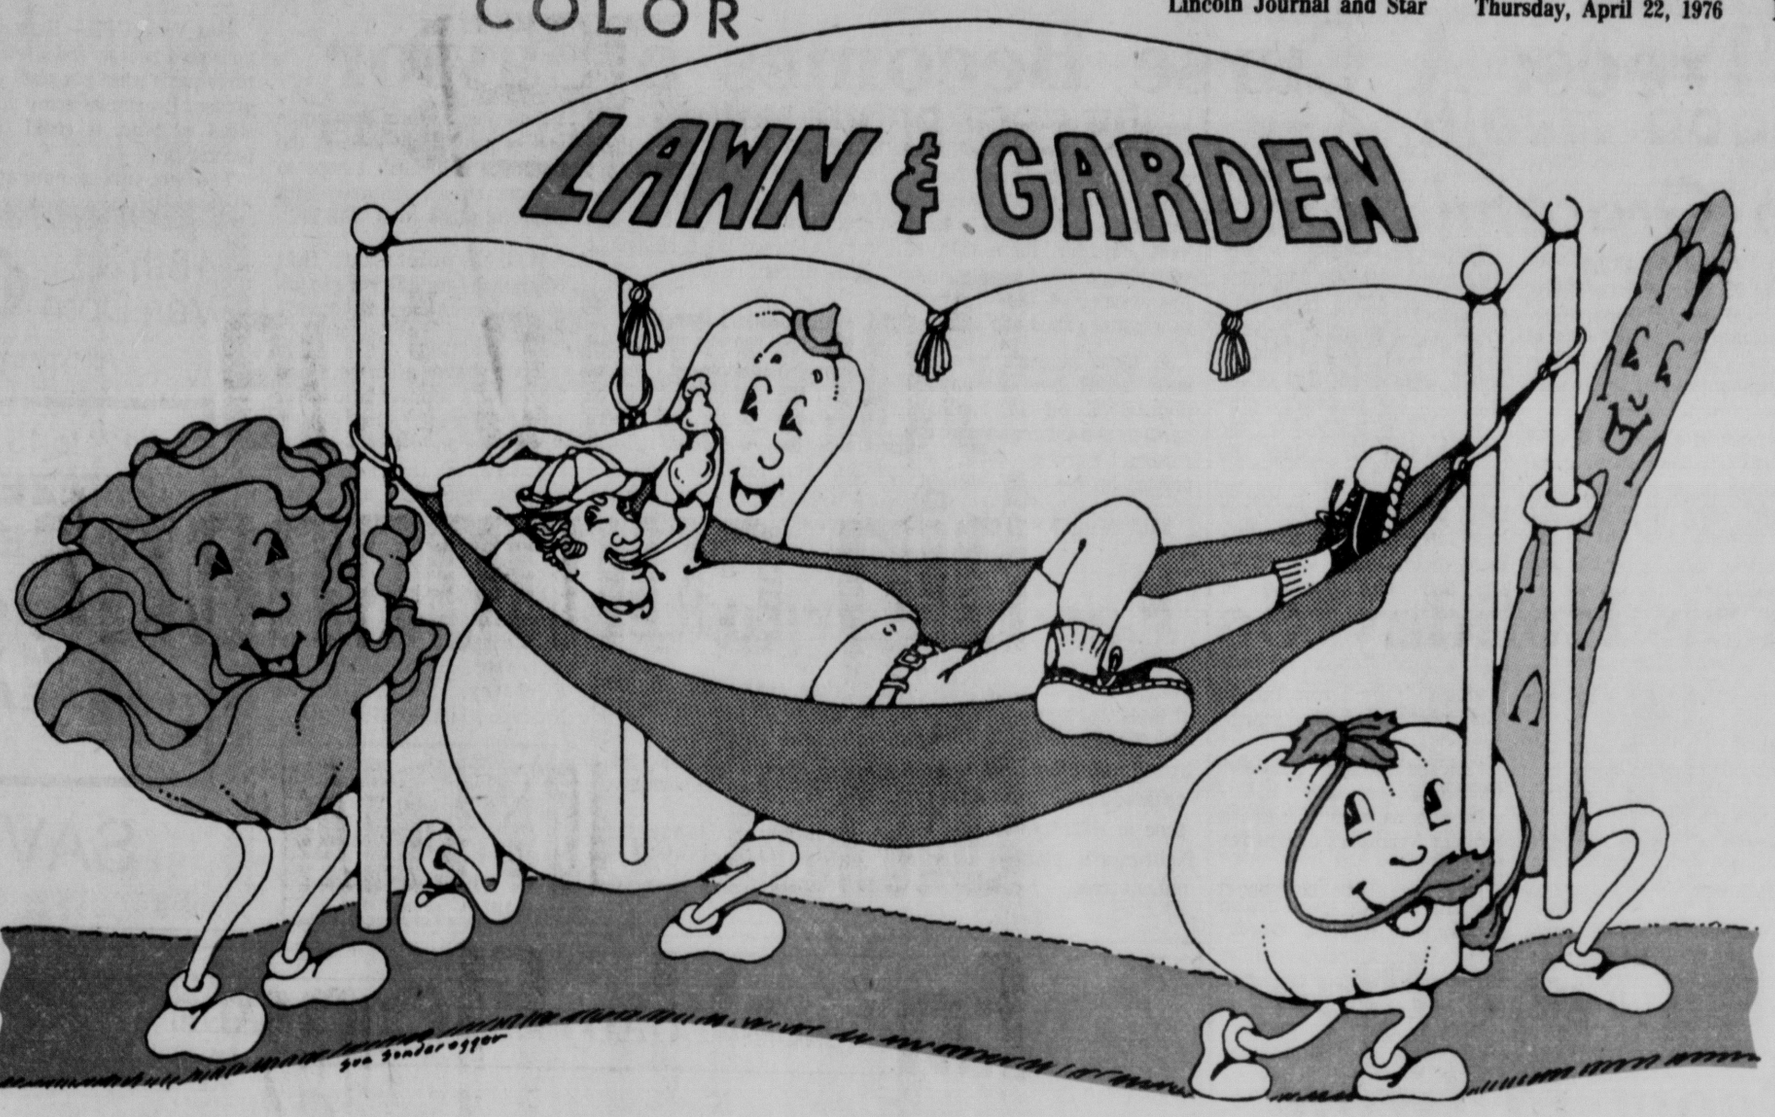
Hate the great outdoors? Get even with those who have greener pastures.



By Jim Moore
Special Contributor

Are you a gardener who — well — hates to garden? Do you own a lawn and/or garden that's making your life miserable? Are you being enslaved by a plot of earth that irritates, baffles and humbles you?

If so, be of good heart. The words that follow are written especially for you.

Self-Respect

First, my friend, let's restore a modicum of self-respect to your existence. The "hate-to-garden" gardener who lives in the average suburb is snooted and rejected — a forlorn creature who may eventually turn to drink or even move into an apartment.

It's been said that a little knowledge can be a dangerous thing. This is true. And you, my hate-to-garden friend, are going to use this saying to change your status in the neighborhood.

Write the University of Nebraska Extension Service and ask for a pamphlet on Midwest lawn care. Read this quickly, picking out every big word you can find. Now you're ready.

Saunter over to that neighbor on your block who has the best lawn and start a conversation on any pretext. In the midst of this chat, stoop down and begin looking for a discolored blade of grass. When you've found one, simply blurt out:

"Helminthosporium Blight!!!"

Conversation

You've now baited your hook. From this point, the conversation should go something like this, in most cases, your neighbor will sputter:

"Huh? — (gasp!) wha-wha-what did you say?"

"I said Helminthosporium Blight. I'm afraid, John, you've got a slug of ol' helmo—"

"But — but what's that?"

"Well, John, I hate to be the bearer of sad tidings, but, in plain layman's terms, your lawn's got the galloping crud."

"Good grief! What causes that?"

"Among other things, John, it's due to what might be called bad cultural practices."

"But how could that be? I do everything I'm supposed to. I apply preemergent every spring, fertilize twice a year, aerate every two years, power rake both spring and fall. What more can I do?"

"Aha! That's precisely what's wrong, John."

"What?"

Too Perfect

"Your lawn's too plush — too perfect. It's got too tight a thatch. You've created precisely the kind of lawn that helmo blight likes best. Now, me . . . As you may have noticed, I don't use all the, ahem, intense cultural practices that you employ. I used to, of course. In fact, at our former home I had the finest lawn on the block . . ."

Are you getting the idea?

Of course, the truly avid "hate-to-garden" gardener will never stop at this point. Equal parts of one-upmanship and intimidation may have restored a little self-respect, but if he's to reach those Elysian Fields where laziness and sloth receive their true reward, he must persist.

The "hate-to-garden" gardener will next visit a nursery and buy three plants — euonymus sarcoxie, divaricata cotoneaster and polygonium renoutria.

Trees: A Curse Becomes a Savior

On March 1, 1878, Alfred P Seymour wrote in his diary, "Left old Connecticut," and until March 8, his entries read "On our way to Nebraska."

On March 9, he arrived with his father and mother, brother and sister in Syracuse, Nebr., where they bought 160 acres of railroad land, to be known throughout the rest of his journal as "Prairie Farm."

On September 27, 1879, he ordered 500 maple trees.

Roger Welsch, Nebraska folklorist and University of Nebraska assistant professor, shared the settler's diary to stress early Nebraskans' love for trees.

Trees Like Weeds

He noted that Seymour came from areas where trees were weeds — pioneers in Indiana, Connecticut, and Vermont fought trees every step of the way. In Czechoslovakia and Norway, they grubbed out the roots, hacked the saplings, and hauled away the logs.

But when they surveyed Nebraska's desert plains, they agreed with the words of James Fenimore Cooper: "(The Plains) resemble the Steppes of Tartary more than any other known portion of the world, being in fact a vast country incapable of sustaining a dense population in the absence of the two, great necessaries (wood and water)."

So these pioneers who had once cursed trees now found themselves buying saplings, nursing them through the dry seasons, carrying water, and praying for the twigs' survival.

Said Welsch, "That's why Nebraska became the home of Arbor Day -- not because there were so many trees here, but 'rather because there were so few, because it was here that people learned the hardships of a life without trees."

Philosophical Question

On July 29, 1878, Alfred Seymour philosophized, "As I sit here I think how great will be the changes in 10 years. There are several tracts of railroad land yet for sale and the speculators are largely represented around us. There is but one house nearer than a mile and comparatively little of the prairie is cultivated. I hope to see our streets yet lined with beautiful shade trees. Will I?"

Welsch points out that Nebraskans are still trying to fully realize Alfred Seymour's dream.

They have also retained Seymour's appreciation for trees. "Trees," says Welsch, "have become the priceless treasure of the Plainsman because trees, like man, have had such a struggle for survival on the Plains."

The Holiday So Easily Forgotten

For a holiday, Arbor Day has suffered a good deal.

Round men in red coats and cotton-tailed rabbits ignore it.

Wholesalers and retailers wholly neglect it.

Workers who work on Arbor Day ridicule it, lumping it together with other ineffectual holidays — like Shrove Tuesday and Columbus' wedding anniversary.

Children who aren't quite sure what arbors are suspect it.

Despite its woes, Arbor Day remains Nebraska's only native-born holiday.

Nebraska City newspaper publisher J. Sterling Morton realized that trees enrich the soil and conserve moisture. Through his efforts, Arbor Day was set aside and celebrated for the first time in 1872. On that first day, Nebraskans planted over a million trees.

Other states subsequently recognized the value of elms and oaks and cottonwoods, and joined in the promotion of a special day for tree planting.

Thursday is Arbor Day. Celebrate it in the shade of your favorite arbor.

For further information on how to order, plant and grow trees, contact the Nebraska State Forester, Department of Forestry, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, NE 68583.

Give Your Plants Room to Grow

By Earl Aronson, AP

Soon you'll be back in the garden planting. Don't crowd the vegetables. You will probably get less rather than more if you don't give them enough space.

Thin vegetable plants when they are small, making sure the soil is moist, to reduce injury to remaining plants.

Thin root crops such as turnips and rutabagas before their tap roots become fleshy. Leave onions and radishes in the ground until they are big enough to eat, then thin and leave the others to develop.

You're better off thinning plants than sowing seeds far apart because you can't be sure how many seeds will germinate.

Water Carefully

Horticulturists advise that too much water will do more harm to your garden plants than too little. If too much water remains around the roots, wilting, yellowing of foliage, reduced strength often will result. Plants that have been growing well may wilt within a few hours if roots are inundated with water.

Excess water is generally due to poor drainage, application of too much water or watering too often. Water once a week in summer but moisten the soil to a depth of six inches.

Sunny and Shady

Plant leafy vegetables in the shaded part of your garden if you have both sun and shade. You'll find that lettuce, kale and other leafy vegetables and such root vegetables as carrots and turnips will tolerate more shade than tomatoes, corn, beans and other crops raised for above-ground fruit.

If you are going to transplant vegetables, water thoroughly before you take them out of their containers or the garden row. Wet soil will stick to the roots and reduce chance of root damage.

The best time to transplant vegetables is in the evening. The plants will have an opportunity to get over the shock before a hot sun can set them back.

If you are planting perennial vegetables put them at the side or end of the garden, rather than the middle. Then asparagus, rhubarb and the like, which will grow in the same place for many years, won't be disturbed when you cultivate and harvest.

Horticulturists advise planting tall crops, such as sweet corn, on the north side of the garden so that you won't shade other crops.

They also note that you can plant any garden crop next to any other, except sweet corn next to popcorn or field corn. Sweet corn and popcorn pollinating simultaneously will cross-pollinate, affecting the edible part of both crops.

You can plant melons and cucumbers or squash, peppers and tomatoes, beans and peas side by side without their being affected by cross-pollination. However, it will affect the seed production.

Potatoes

If you plan to plant potatoes we recommend that you buy certified seed potatoes because they are certified disease-free.

Number of Pounds

To the question how many pounds of tomatoes you can expect from each plant, horticulturist John A. Wott of Purdue University replies:

"This will depend on the particular variety planted and how vigorous the plants grow. Each normal vine-type plant should produce an average of 12-15 pounds of tomatoes. Good yielders may produce double that amount.

Billbugs undergo three stages of development. The mature billbug (left) can do hundreds of dollars worth of damage despite his less-than-a-penny length.

Bluegrass Billbug Breeds Trouble in Midla(w)nds

If you're going buggy trying to figure out why your lawn is brown and patchy even though you've watered and fertilized, you may have company.

Your lawn may be going buggy too.

According to Dr. Dean Kindler, Research Entomologist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, many people who see their grass dying during the summer blame it on heat and drought, when in reality, it may very likely be the bluegrass billbug at work.

"The mature adult," Dr. Kindler explains, "is a typical weevil with a distinct snout, about ¼ inch long, and black in color. They are slow moving and will frequently play possum when molested. At times, they may be seen walking on sidewalks or driveways in the fall near infested turf."

According to Dr. Kindler, the billbug was first discovered in the late 1880s, where it was very prevalent in prairie grasses such as timothy and orchard grass.

Late Appearance

Although entomologists have been aware of the bug for almost 100 years, little is known about it. Extensive damage was not discovered in Nebraska, says Dr. Kindler, until 1961 — nearly 80 years after its first appearance in the prairie. This damage probably resulted when farmers plowed under the prairies and the disturbed billbug attacked subsequent corn crops planted there.

There is usually one brood of billbug annually, says Dr. Kindler. But, that one brood can be very damaging.

The adult overwinters on or near the soil surface, usually in protected spots under trees or bushes. "Depending on temperature," he continues, "adults become active in late April or May, laying eggs in the grass stems, near the crown, in holes chewed there by the females. Small larvae feed first on the stems, and as they grow, leave the stem to feed on the roots, severing them. Adults begin to emerge in late July."

Roots Destroyed

When large billbug populations are present in a patch of grass, root systems are completely destroyed, and the grass turns brown. "This damage," he says, "may be mistaken for white grub or sod webworm injury, diseases, or drought. The greatest damage occurs from late June to late August. The grass dies because it has become separated from the soil, and no amount of fertilizer or water will aid it."

The billbug seems to be particular only to what it eats, not where, which is why it is found at country clubs, city parks, freeway median strips, lawns — anywhere there is Kentucky bluegrass.

The first thing to do, according to Dr. Kindler, is determine if turf injury was caused by billbugs before considering any type of control.

Nature Helps

Biological controls help keep the pest in check. "A small wasp attacks the eggs of several species," explains Dr. Kindler, "destroying them at oviposition. Also, many birds such as the catbird, brown thrush, field sparrow, and others are feeders on the billbug."

Cultural control is the second means. Dr. Kindler says that while the billbug prefers Kentucky bluegrass, he is preferential as to types. "The most susceptible types are Pennstar, Washington source, Merion, Warren's A-20, Windsor, Sodco, and Nuggett."

However, Dr. Kindler cites the most reliable control for the billbug in Nebraska is to apply an insecticide in mid-May to kill overwintering adults before they deposit their eggs.

Dr. Kindler feels the bluegrass billbug may become one of the major pests for homeowners. "Unless you're careful, it is one of those insects that you don't know is around until it's too late. If it isn't controlled, it will wipe out bluegrass."

Landscaping Like Money in Bank

Anything you can do to enhance your home is like putting money in the bank, and an easy and inexpensive way to do it is through landscape improvement.

One of the most often overlooked aspects of the home is the outdoor living space, says Dr. Don Steinegger, University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension horticulturist. Selecting the right plants for the homescape should take just as much thought as selecting drapes, wallpaper, furniture, or carpeting. Yet, landscaping is often regarded by the homeowner as incidental, of secondary importance at best.

To some homeowners, says Steinegger, landscaping is for others. It is enough to keep the lawn mowed and occasionally watered so that it doesn't completely die. Plants around the home become a nuisance, the care of which may interfere with a game of golf, a fishing jaunt, the bridge club, or may upset the budget when the water bill gets too high because of a summer drouth.

Planting Personality

Even if the effect is subliminal, the home landscaping reflects the nature and personality of its owner. A neat, well-groomed, functional outdoors reflects a person's pride and well-being, as well as a sense of organization. It says that the homeowner enjoys his home both inside and out, and living is meaningful and fun.

$19.95 may seem like a big price to pay for a tree, but it's a one-time cost and a worthwhile investment that keeps growing. While many things in life depreciate in value, plant materials in the home landscape increase in value.

An $800 sofa may be worthless in 10 or 15 years, but that $19.95 live oak or pecan tree may be worth 10 times the purchase price after the same period of time.

10% Minimum

Of course, landscaping does not stop with the purchase of a live oak, says Steinegger. Good landscaping does not come cheaply, even for the "do-it-yourselfer." A well-landscaped home should reflect a minimum investment of 10% of the value of your home, he says. For example, if you have a $40,000 home, approximately $4,000 should be invested in the outdoor landscaped living area.

The average homeowner is probably shocked at such a figure, but that includes many facets of the landscape, such as fencing and paving for patios, etc., and not just plant materials.

Home landscaping need not be a burdensome chore. One doesn't have to be a "nut" or a hobbiest or even a weekend gardener to have a nicely landscaped home.

Home grounds can be designed so that one is not a Saturday slave to the yard, but this takes planning. And keep in mind that low maintenance designs can be aesthetically pleasing, says Steinegger.

Consulting Clues

There are professional landscape architects to consult for planning the total landscape. Or talk to a local nurseryman about landscaping needs and let him suggest ideas for planting. If you can't afford a complete landscape job all at once, do it gradually over a period of years and stretch out the enjoyment which comes with such a creative effort. Most people budget their designs to be complete in five years on the average.

Gardening Is Cheaper

Los Altos, Calif. (UPI) — Typical home gardeners are 40 to 60-year-old suburbanites who have space for planting, and who are spending more time at home because of the economy. They are doing less waterskiing, camping and other money-consuming sports, says James Wilson of the National Garden Bureau.

He added that ecologically minded young people, LTs (living togethers) and college students are doing a fair amount of gardening, some on college campuses.

More City Folks Garden

New York (UPI) — Although urbanites are gardening in ever-increasing numbers a survey by Roper Reports indicates that the farther people live from cities the more likely they are to garden. The study indicated that two-thirds of small town and rural residents grow vegetables, as do 56% of midwesterners

Billbugs undergo three stages of development. The mature billbug (left) can do hundreds of dollars worth of damage despite his less-than-a-penny length.

Bluegrass Billbug Breeds Trouble in Midla(w)nds

If you're going buggy trying to figure out why your lawn is brown and patchy even though you've watered and fertilized, you may have company.

Your lawn may be going buggy too.

According to Dr. Dean Kindler, Research Entomologist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, many people who see their grass dying during the summer blame it on heat and drought, when in reality, it may very likely be the bluegrass billbug at work.

"The mature adult," Dr. Kindler explains, "is a typical weevil with a distinct snout, about ¼ inch long, and black in color. They are slow moving and will frequently play possum when molested. At times, they may be seen walking on sidewalks or driveways in the fall near infested turf."

According to Dr. Kindler, the billbug was first discovered in the late 1880s, where it was very prevalent in prairie grasses such as timothy and orchard grass.

Late Appearance

Although entomologists have been aware of the bug for almost 100 years, little is known about it. Extensive damage was not discovered in Nebraska, says Dr. Kindler, until 1961 — nearly 80 years after its first appearance in the prairie. This damage probably resulted when farmers plowed under the prairies and the disturbed billbug attacked subsequent corn crops planted there.

There is usually one brood of billbug annually, says Dr. Kindler. But, that one brood can be very damaging.

The adult overwinters on or near the soil surface, usually in protected spots under trees or bushes. "Depending on temperature," he continues, "adults become active in late April or May, laying eggs in the grass stems, near the crown, in holes chewed there by the females. Small larvae feed first on the stems, and as they grow, leave the stem to feed on the roots, severing them. Adults begin to emerge in late July."

Roots Destroyed

When large billbug populations are present in a patch of grass, root systems are completely destroyed, and the grass turns brown. "This damage," he says, "may be mistaken for white grub or sod webworm injury, diseases, or drought. The greatest damage occurs from late June to late August. The grass dies because it has become separated from the soil, and no amount of fertilizer or water will aid it."

The billbug seems to be particular only to what it eats, not where, which is why it is found at country clubs, city parks, freeway median strips, lawns — anywhere there is Kentucky bluegrass.

The first thing to do, according to Dr. Kindler, is determine if turf injury was caused by billbugs before considering any type of control.

Nature Helps

Biological controls help keep the pest in check. "A small wasp attacks the eggs of several species," explains Dr. Kindler, "destroying them at oviposition. Also, many birds such as the catbird, brown thrush, field sparrow, and others are feeders on the billbug."

Cultural control is the second means. Dr. Kindler says that while the billbug prefers Kentucky bluegrass, he is preferential as to types. "The most susceptible types are Pennstar, Washington source, Merion, Warren's A-20, Windsor, Sodco, and Nuggett."

However, Dr. Kindler cites the most reliable control for the billbug in Nebraska is to apply an insecticide in mid-May to kill overwintering adults before they deposit their eggs.

Dr. Kindler feels the bluegrass billbug may become one of the major pests for homeowners. "Unless you're careful, it is one of those insects that you don't know is around until it's too late. If it isn't controlled, it will wipe out bluegrass."

Gardening Is Cheaper

Los Altos, Calif. (UPI) — Typical home gardeners are 40 to 60-year-old suburbanites who have space for planting, and who are spending more time at home because of the economy. They are doing less waterskiing, camping and other money-consuming sports, says James Wilson of the National Garden Bureau.

He added that ecologically minded young people, LTs (living togethers) and college students are doing a fair amount of gardening, some on college campuses.

More City Folks Garden

New York (UPI) — Although urbanites are gardening in ever-increasing numbers, a survey by Roper Reports indicates that the farther people live from cities the more likely they are to garden. The study indicated that two-thirds of small town and rural residents grow vegetables, as do 56% of midwesterners.

Landscaping Like Money in Bank

Anything you can do to enhance your home is like putting money in the bank, and an easy and inexpensive way to do it is through landscape improvement.

One of the most often overlooked aspects of the home is the outdoor living space, says Dr. Don Steinegger, University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension horticulturist. Selecting the right plants for the homescape should take just as much thought as selecting drapes, wallpaper, furniture, or carpeting. Yet, landscaping is often regarded by the homeowner as incidental, of secondary importance at best.

To some homeowners, says Steinegger, landscaping is for others. It is enough to keep the lawn mowed and occasionally watered so that it doesn't completely die. Plants around the home become a nuisance, the care of which may interfere with a game of golf, a fishing jaunt, the bridge club, or may upset the budget when the water bill gets too high because of a summer drouth.

Planting Personality

Even if the effect is subliminal, the home landscaping reflects the nature and personality of its owner. A neat, well-groomed, functional outdoors reflects a person's pride and well-being, as well as a sense of organization. It says that the homeowner enjoys his home both inside and out, and living is meaningful and fun.

$19.95 may seem like a big price to pay for a tree, but it's a one-time cost and a worthwhile investment that keeps growing. While many things in life depreciate in value, plant materials in the home landscape increase in value.

An $800 sofa may be worthless in 10 or 15 years, but that $19.95 live oak or pecan tree may be worth 10 times the purchase price after the same period of time.

10% Minimum

Of course, landscaping does not stop with the purchase of a live oak, says Steinegger. Good landscaping does not come cheaply, even for the "do-it-yourselfer." A well-landscaped home should reflect a minimum investment of 10% of the value of your home, he says. For example, if you have a $40,000 home, approximately $4,000 should be invested in the outdoor landscaped living area.

The average homeowner is probably shocked at such a figure, but that includes many facets of the landscape, such as fencing and paving for patios, etc., and not just plant materials.

Home landscaping need not be a burdensome chore. One doesn't have to be a "nut" or a hobbiest or even a weekend gardener to have a nicely landscaped home.

Home grounds can be designed so that one is not a Saturday slave to the yard, but this takes planning. And keep in mind that low maintenance designs can be aesthetically pleasing, says Steinegger.

Consulting Clues

There are professional landscape architects to consult for planning the total landscape. Or talk to a local nurseryman about landscaping needs and let him suggest ideas for planting. If you can't afford a complete landscape job all at once, do it gradually over a period of years and stretch out the enjoyment which comes with such a creative effort. Most people budget their designs to be complete in five years on the average.

The Snapper Season is Here Again!

Snapper mowers have vacuum action that cleans your lawn as you mow. Another reason Snapper is fast.

The center-mounted grass catcher holds 2½ bushels so you empty less often.

And the rear-wheel drive on all self-propelled mowers gives greater traction. As the grass catcher fills, rear-wheel traction gets even better. Snapper's automatic free-wheeling feature makes for safer control.

Many Other Cities Donate Space for Growth

By United Press International

This year more Americans than ever will prove that something besides taxes can be raised on city land

Pollsters say 47 to 53% of all American households plan to plant vegetable gardens and not just in their own backyards

Paradoxically some seedsmen say sales are down from last year But James Wilson, head of the National Garden Bureau, the seed trade's educational and promotion organization, agrees with Jerome Kantor, assistant to the president of Burpee Seed Co in Philadelphia Both say it is too early to get a reading on sales

'The mail order people don't know yet and rack sales haven't begun' said Wilson Seed sales are going up but we haven't hit the peak yet

10% Increase

Kantor said his educated guess is a 10% increase compared with 15% increases over the past two seasons

Wilson an agronomist said he does not expect 1976 sales to match the tremendous growth of the past four years

In Greenwood S C horticulturist Glenn Vincent of the Park Seed Co sees gardening moving out of the traditional in terms of having a plot of land

'People are planting in tubs, patios and on fences

They also plant on public and corporate property, with the blessing of municipal and state authorities and companies that provide plots for employes

Many communities encourage residents to grow food to save money says B H 'Tommy Thompson director of operations for Gardens for All, Inc of Shelburne Vt This nonprofit organization was established in 1972 to encourage community vegetable gardening as a way of coping with high food prices and developing self-sufficiency in food production It is funded by membership dues and voluntary contributions

39 Families

Thompson said Gardens for All was organized by 39 families in Burlington Vt at the suggestion of two Head Start teachers who wanted to introduce their children to gardening

"They went from backyard gardens and very small gardens the first year to tearing up their whole front lawns right here in Burlington for vegetable gardens,' he added

Thompson said the community gardening trend covers the nation Last year Los Angeles alone had about 5,500 plots, St Louis, about 7 000 and Chicago, 1 600, Thompson said, adding that about 25 million more Americans would like to garden if they had land

'People in apartments and tenements who plant roof gardens and window boxes — these are the ones we really try to find land for," Thompson said.

Most community gardens are self-supporting their costs covered by modest rental fees paid by gardeners A lot of manpower and material is volunteered

The Community Organic Garden of Wauconda Ill a Chicago suburb developed from telephone operator Mary Larson's fight against air pollution Mrs Larson and her family had moved out of the city because their daughter then 9 years old and a victim of multiple sclerosis suffered from pollution allergies

Mrs Larson suggested the garden as a way of disposing of fallen leaves without burning them Residents, including children, rake leaves in the fall and spread them on garden plots on eight acres of village-owned land Last year's crops were so plentiful that they sold their surplus from a wagon Mrs Larson hopes the sale can be repeated this year

Feds Helping

Even the federal government is helping The Cornell University Cooperative Extension Service is among the beneficiaries of federal funds for projects to benefit small gardeners nationwide Some will be used for a pilot project of demonstration gardens in Brooklyn's Bedford-Stuyvesant section in cooperation with the extension service the Monroe St Block Association and the Office of Rep Frederick Richmond D-Brooklyn In an act of Congress, Richmond freed funds to support model urban gardening and demonstration sites in cities

Richmond is the only urban member of the House Agriculture Committee

The Magnolia Tree Earth Center, also in the Bedford-Stuyvesant section, plans to repeat its project of last summer when its members grew flowers and vegetables in the backyards of three city-owned brownstone buildings The center is named for a magnolia tree that local residents saved from destruction

States that actively encourage gardening on public lands include Connecticut, Vermont, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania

In Ft Pitt, Pa, last year, the local chapter of a nationwide organization of telephone company employes joined Gov Milton Schapp's anti-inflation gardens program, buying seeds and seedlings and reselling them to colleagues The Colonial Council Telephone Pioneers of America also sponsored a family garden project on vacant land at Woodville State Hospital that was so successful it will be repeated this year at Schapp's request

In Yankton, S D, Gurney Seed and Nursery Co encourages its customers to share their experiences The current catalog quotes Nicholas Schoon of Roseburg, Ore, as saying he picked his last raspberries the day before Thanksgiving last year Joe Jaksa of Hampden, Mass, said he harvested six wheelbarrow loads of carrots from his six-acre plot and canned enough vegetables to last all winter

Sandy Is Best

Rochester, N Y (UPI) — The best garden soil is sandy loam, but clay soil also can be used if it is well drained, says a spokesman for a seedsman here He said light, sandy soil generally needs the addition of humus, peat moss, compost or manure

City Provides Garden Space

Lincoln city government is again providing space free-of-charge to prospective gardeners

The gardens are in vacant lots owned by the city They are scattered throughout a diagonal area from about 20th & P to 48th & Fremont Sts

The space is available on a first come, first serve basis Anybody interested in using city space for gardening should contact the City Real Estate office at 129 N 10th

There is no limit on the size of plot any one gardener can request

There is a catch however The city doesn't provide any water and it is questionable whether there is any running water available at some of the lots In any event it is the gardeners responsibility to get water to their crops

A Garden Calendar

January

Now's the time to order seed . . . ordering early will assure that you receive seed in time for favorable planting. Watch cold frames carefully; ventilate gradually as frost begins to melt on glass. Don't let temperature inside frames get too high on sunny days.

February

While tree branches are bare is best time to prune. Now is also a good time to take inventory of your garden tools, making any needed repairs. Enjoy a preview of spring by bringing in a few branches for forcing into bloom. And keep an eye on cold frames!

March

Start seeding lettuce now, even if snow is still on the ground, over soil prepared in the fall. You may have a salad early, with any luck. Pull out any weeds in your cold frames; this may be done on a warm day, when removing sash will not harm plants.

April

It's time to feed your lawn: when trees begin to bud. Air plants in cold frames whenever weather is favorable. Hardy plants can be planted out; before transplanting, keep glass sash covering off them for about a week. Keep an eye on cold frames.

May

Most tender plants can be put outdoors during this month. Enjoy the flowers new in bloom, making a note of results attained. It's a good idea to keep a notebook on what has proved successful for yourself and for other gardeners.

June

Pay special attention to watering this month. Water should go down about 2 feet to encourage deep rooting. Now is also the time for frequent shallow cultivation of vegetable gardens, cut flower gardens, flower beds borders. Look for pests, diseases.

July

Because this is often a hot and dry month, watch for signs of drought. When you water, soak the ground deeply, then wait until plants need water to keep from wilting, before watering again. It's a good idea to let grass grow longer than usual to shade roots.

August

Pay particular attention to regular spraying and dusting of roses this month, and keep a sharp eye out for pests or disease on other plants as well. Now's the time to order bulbs for planting in the fall, and it's a good time to divide phlox, iris and day-lilies as well.

September

If you're planning to bring plants indoors, be sure you give them a dose of bugspray beforehand! It's a good time to start a new lawn or improve an existing one by sowing seed, in cool climates. Plant your trees and shrubs now, harvest fruits, vegetables.

October

Time to plant bulbs! Plant your favorites: daffodils, tulips, hyacinths, and other spring-blooming flowers now. Before frost arrives, be sure you feed your lawn thoroughly, for pleasing results next year. This is also the time to clear away dead stems, debris.

November

This is a good time to catch up on your garden reading; and bring your notebook up to date. Make cold frames snug for the coming winter. After ground has frozen, a light covering of salt, hay or leaves over perennials and biennials give added protection.

December

Clip sprigs of pine, holly, and other evergreens, store them in plastic bag in the refrigerator, have them ready for decorating Christmas packages! Check your cold frames; when sash are not covered with snow, provide needed protection with coverings at night.

Extension Service

When one needs to know something about gardening or cooking and preserving vegetables, call the Lancaster County Extension Office. The agents at the Extension office will provide just about any assistance you may need.

The Lancaster County Extension Service can help in several ways. They have free circulars on gardening and using vegetables. One of the new types of circular is called "NebGuide". These pamphlets contain concise information on growing garden crops. In addition Extension circulars and NSDA bulletins are available with detailed information.

Often a telephone call will provide the information needed. However, some persons bring their garden insects or disease problem to the office for diagnosis. The Extension office also will test the gauge on pressure canners to make certain they are safe to use.

Meetings and workshops are popular ways to secure knowledge on gardening. Besides the early spring garden meetings, workshops on freezing and canning fruits and vegetables are held in May.

Neighbors Wondering . . .

By Lloyd Green
(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Chicago — Some people say all you need to be a successful home gardener is a spading fork, a few seeds and the ability to wear a size 46 jacket and a size 5 hat.

True, a touch of stupidity helps. No one would ever plant a garden if careful consideration were given to the work involved.

At the same time, being a successful home gardener requires more than a sprig of cunning. No dummy can be expected to persuade his wife and children that pulling weeds is fun as the summer progresses.

But as a home gardener of 25 years standing (or bending), I can attest that the battle against Mother Nature is worth it.

Now, some people might say that Mother Nature is a partner in gardening. If that's true, how come there are bugs, cutworms, fungus, depleted soil and too much or not enough heat and rain?

Moreover, if Mother Nature is so kindly and helpful, why didn't she ever manage to find a husband? It's obvious that nobody wanted her.

Oh, well, you don't have to talk to Mother Nature to be a successful gardener. All you have to do is talk to your plants.

Some self-appointed experts, of course, say that talking to your plants does no good. I have proof that it does.

When you talk to your plants, all your neighbors become convinced you're crazy. They grow fearful you might harm their little darlings.

So they make your yard off-limits to their children, who otherwise would stomp your garden.

Another neglected art besides talking to plants is listening to plants.

I begin pounding the ground while the snow is still flying, which also helps persuade my neighbors that my mental state is not the same as theirs.

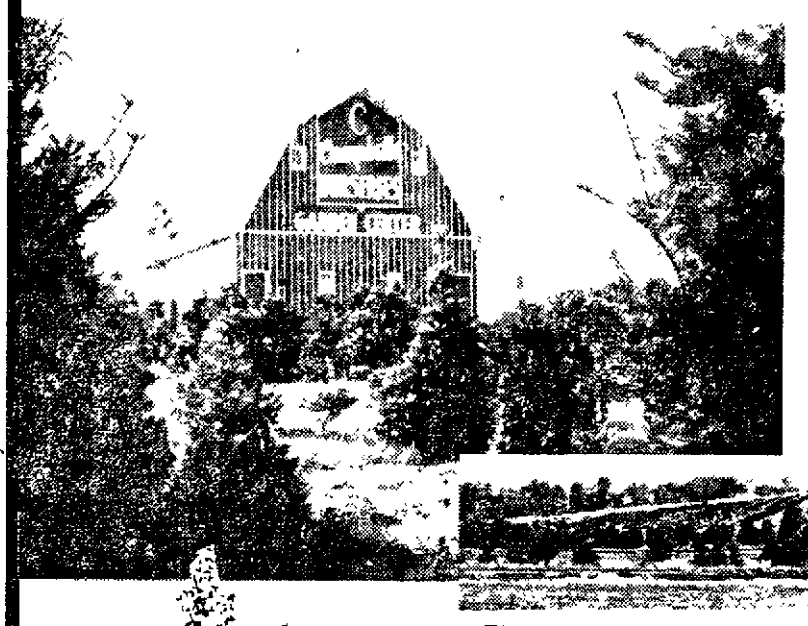
Within a few days, tiny plants begin to pop up. That's the time to listen, if you have doubts about plants talking.

"You idiot! What are you doing putting us out here so soon?" Take off your shoes and dig your feet down into this cold dirt and see how you like it."

It goes on and on, but most is not fit for a family newspaper.

Bet You Don't Realize . . .

How Campbell's Nurseries have grown. From a backyard nursery to our present 18 acre sales grounds at 2342 South 40th, and now an additional 80 acres of growing nursery stock, both small and large, which are brought in and displayed at our garden center on South 40th.



This is a view of our Big Red Barn Here much of our nursery stock is processed for sale at our garden center. While most people are tearing down Nebraska barns we have built one that we think has character and beauty. We do not have a sales ground at the farm as yet (which is in our plans for the future) so at this time we do not keep salesmen here, but many trees are dug for the customer's approval and can be seen at our south 40th St Nursery and Garden Center.

This is a view of one of our blocks of young nursery stock now growing to later be planted at new homes in Lincoln and surrounding territory. Our farm is all contoured and terraced for soil conservation purposes and we find that we have a very productive clay for our young trees.

Garden Brings Time to Reflect

By Betty Stevens

Louie Kruse, 2222 D St , is 94 years old and has been gardening for himself and Mrs Kruse for 70 years

Before that, he helped his mother when he was just a little tad, he said He s been gardening the same plot behind the Kruse home since 1913

Has he worn out the soil?

'You can t wear it out if you cover it with leaves and garbage, ' he said

Kruse plants by the moon Full moon plant root vegetables, dark of the moon, plant vegetables that have their fruit above the ground

And he s a great believer in natural bug and worm repellants Hot peppers, marigolds and garlic are some of the plants which make it difficult for pests, Kruse said

Elusive Date

After 70 years of gardening, has Kruse figured out when the frost date is?

'That s one thing you never know, ' he said He planted his tomatoes four times last year, for various reasons, before they began to grow

When Kruse isn't gardening, he s reading about it or preserving it Last year he canned 16 qdarts of tomatoes out of his yield "That took us through the whole winter," he said, stressing the economic importance of growing your own food "The enjoyment of it — that's the thing, ' Kruse said

Kruse has peppers, tomatoes, hollyhocks, and marigolds among other things growing in hot beds in a tool shed on the back of his lot

Peas onion, Swiss chard, radishes and beets are planted Kruse had some concern about that this year Being 94 is not all that exciting Kruse explained ' You just can t do the things you want to do," he said

Couldn't Plow

One of those things he couldn t do this year was plow up his garden

Meeting financial guidelines, Kruse got in touch with the Lincoln Action Programs (LAP) garden project

Stephanie Ryan, community and neighborhood services coordinator for LAP, said the project assists gardens in the community plot on Malone Community Center property, with individual gardens, and with patio gardens

For those qualifying there are free seeds, and tools, hoses, etc which can be borrowed

There were 80 participants in the county last year and 32 so far in the city this year — the first time it has been available in Lincoln

But Kruse didn't need that much help All he needed was to have his plot plowed up Rick Robertson, an employe of the Lincoln Information Service for the Elderly, did the job and that's why Kruse sits in his lawn chair a lot these days just waiting for things to grow

"Now if I had a few chickens and rabbits and a couple stands of bees, I d be sitting pretty," Kruse said

Louie Kruse, 94, has earned the right to rock after 74 years of uninterrupted backyard gardening.

Gardens Can Go Around The World

By Frederick M. Winship
United Press International

The game of one-upmanship is being played in the cabbage patch

Any home gardener can produce standard varieties It takes imagination to grow the exotic, such as Japanese gobo, Chinese yard-long beans, or blue potatoes, or to pioneer new vegetables

In the United States, gobo is known as burdock, a hated prickly weed Its long, slender, dark roots are delicious deep-fried or cooked in soy sauce Chinese yard-long beans actually measure one-and-a-half to three feet The clustered pods make an attractive display when poled

One variety of blue potato has purplish blue skin and white flesh another is blue throughout A South Dakota seedsman recommends the latter for baking, boiling and salads

'People are looking for new things to eat," says Madeline Halsey She and her husband, Raymond, operate the Green Thumb Vegetable Market in Watermill, N Y , with produce from their 330-year-old family farm

"They're more willing to experiment than they used to be, maybe because they ve traveled abroad more Some of our best sellers are Chinese snow peas, round zucchini from France and haricot beans from England '

Size is always an important ploy in upmanship the smallest is good, but the biggest is best You can grow miniature beet-shaped carrots for salads, snacks or whole-pack canning. French courgette squash to be harvested when they are the size of a small sausage or Hungarian mammoth squash that can weigh 100 to 200 pounds at maturity

Oriental vegetables are increasingly popular The Armenian yard-long cucumber really does measure three feet Japanese sanjiaku kuri and Chinese kyoto giant cucumbers are half that size New Hampshire midget watermelons were developed from Korean stock

New or unusual colors in vegetables can raise your garden above the mundane. For example, purple-pod bush beans are so dark some people call them black. They turn dark jade green when cooked Bean beetles avoid purple beans a very practical plus

Lemon cucumbers resemble a lemon in size and color and are sweeter than green varieties

White eggplant, smaller and rounder than the purple-skinned type was developed from a Chinese variety

'We never list anything just because it s offbeat said Lois A Stringer vegetable trial manager at the W Atlee Burpee Co headquarters in Warminster Pa

'The vegetable has to have real value to the customer People tend to be more conservative in vegetable planting than flower planting But you do get innovations that catch on quickly such as the golden beet and the purple head cauliflower

Garden Brings Time to Reflect

By Betty Stevens

Louie Kruse, 2222 D St., is 94 years old and has been gardening for himself and Mrs. Kruse for 70 years.

Before that, he helped his mother when he was just a little tad, he said. He's been gardening the same plot behind the Kruse home since 1913.

Has he worn out the soil?

"You can't wear it out if you cover it with leaves and garbage," he said.

Kruse plants by the moon. Full moon, plant root vegetables; dark of the moon, plant vegetables that have their fruit above the ground.

And he's a great believer in natural bug and worm repellants. Hot peppers, marigolds and garlic are some of the plants which make it difficult for pests, Kruse said.

Elusive Date

After 70 years of gardening, has Kruse figured out when the frost date is?

"That's one thing you never know," he said. He planted his tomatoes four times last year, for various reasons, before they began to grow.

When Kruse isn't gardening, he's reading about it or preserving it. Last year he canned 16 quarts of tomatoes out of his yield. "That took us through the whole winter," he said, stressing the economic importance of growing your own food. "The enjoyment of it — that's the thing," Kruse said.

Kruse has peppers, tomatoes, hollyhocks, and marigolds among other things growing in hot beds in a tool shed on the back of his lot.

Peas, onion, Swiss chard, radishes and beets are planted. Kruse had some concern about that this year. Being 94 is not all that exciting, Kruse explained. "You just can't do the things you want to do," he said.

Couldn't Plow

One of those things he couldn't do this year was plow up his garden.

Meeting financial guidelines, Kruse got in touch with the Lincoln Action Program's (LAP) garden project.

Stephanie Ryan, community and neighborhood services coordinator for LAP, said the project assists gardens in the community plot on Malone Community Center property; with individual gardens; and with patio gardens.

For those qualifying there are free seeds, and tools, hoses, etc. which can be borrowed.

There were 80 participants in the county last year and 32 so far in the city this year — the first time it has been available in Lincoln.

But Kruse didn't need that much help. All he needed was to have his plot plowed up. Rick Robertson, an employe of the Lincoln Information Service for the Elderly, did the job and that's why Kruse sits in his lawn chair a lot these days just waiting for things to grow.

"Now if I had a few chickens and rabbits and a couple stands of bees, I'd be sitting pretty," Kruse said.

Louie Kruse, 94, has earned the right to rock after 74 years of uninterrupted backyard gardening.

Gardens Can Go Around The World

By Frederick M. Winship
United Press International

The game of one-upmanship is being played in the cabbage patch.

Any home gardener can produce standard varieties. It takes imagination to grow the exotic, such as Japanese gobo, Chinese yard-long beans, or blue potatoes, or to pioneer new vegetables.

In the United States, gobo is known as burdock, a hated prickly weed. Its long, slender, dark roots are delicious deep-fried or cooked in soy sauce. Chinese yard-long beans actually measure one-and-a-half to three feet. The clustered pods make an attractive display when poled.

One variety of blue potato has purplish blue skin and white flesh; another is blue throughout. A South Dakota seedsman recommends the latter for baking, boiling and salads.

"People are looking for new things to eat," says Madeline Halsey. She and her husband, Raymond, operate the Green Thumb Vegetable Market in Watermill, N.Y., with produce from their 330-year-old family farm.

"They're more willing to experiment than they used to be, maybe because they've traveled abroad more. Some of our best sellers are Chinese snow peas, round zucchini from France and haricot beans from England."

Size is always an important ploy in upmanship: the smallest is good, but the biggest is best. You can grow miniature beet-shaped carrots for salads, snacks or whole-pack canning; French courgette squash to be harvested when they are the size of a small sausage; or Hungarian mammoth squash that can weigh 100 to 200 pounds at maturity.

Oriental vegetables are increasingly popular. The Armenian yard-long cucumber really does measure three feet. Japanese sanjiaku kiuri and Chinese kyoto giant cucumbers are half that size. New Hampshire midget watermelons were developed from Korean stock.

New or unusual colors in vegetables can raise your garden above the mundane. For example, purple-pod bush beans are so dark some people call them black. They turn dark jade green when cooked. Bean beetles avoid purple beans, a very practical plus.

Lemon cucumbers resemble a lemon in size and color and are sweeter than green varieties.

White eggplant, smaller and rounder than the purple-skinned type, was developed from a Chinese variety.

"We never list anything just because it's offbeat," said Lois A. Stringer, vegetable trial manager at the W. Atlee Burpee Co. headquarters in Warminster, Pa.

"The vegetable has to nave real value to the customer. People tend to be more conservative in vegetable planting than flower planting. But you do get innovations that catch on quickly, such as the golden beet and the purple head cauliflower."

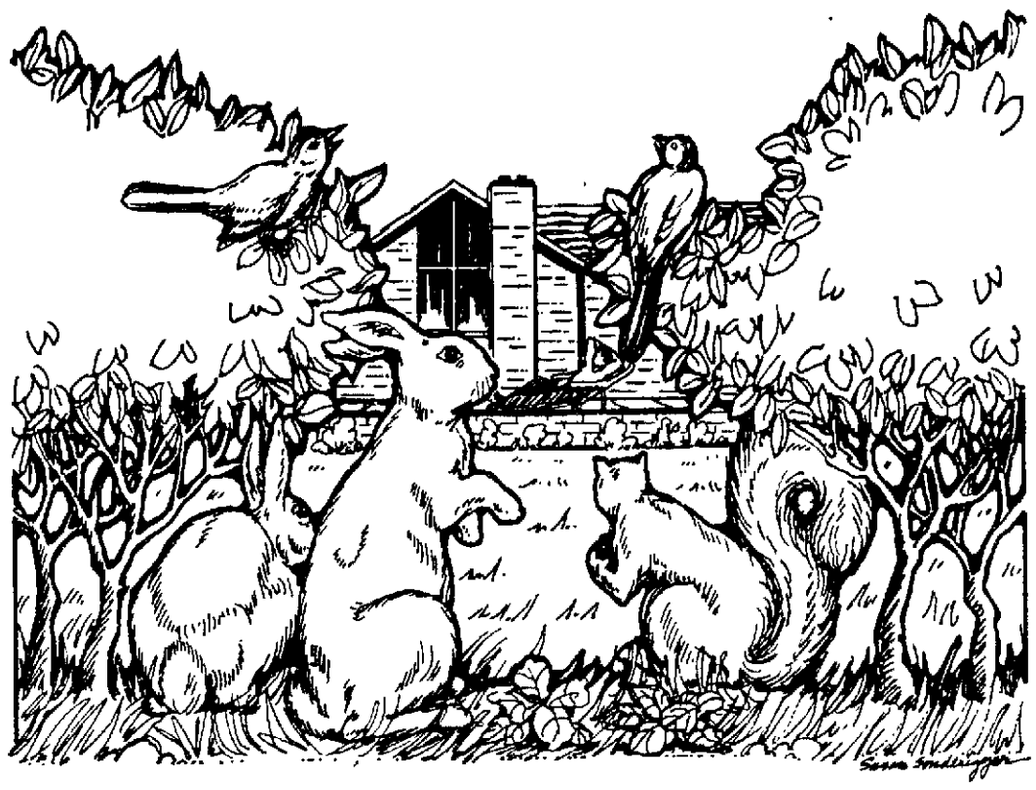
Give Animals A Place to Call Home



If you want birds and other wildlife to make a home in your backyard, give them something to come home to, says Phil Gipson, University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension wildlife specialist. In other words, provide a habitat.

This may include trees, shrubs, grasses and even such things as brush piles, bird feeders and waterers. But don't rush out and buy a bird feeder — start with a plan.

Three Steps

There are three steps to planning a backyard refuge:

(1) Take a piece of graph paper and do a scaled diagram of all your property's dimensions. Make several copies.

(2) Fill in one copy with your current plantings; include the types and precise locations of flowers in each bed and the kinds of grasses in the lawn. This is your "before" record. It will be helpful later on in determining where you may want to move plants already in the ground as well as where to plant new things.

(3) Now comes the fun part — the dream. Don't rush it. Start by gathering all the information you can. Make notes on ideas which appeal to you.

For details on how to plan your outdoor guest room, contact your local county extension office, the Soil Conservation Service (SCS), Natural Resources District (NRD), or the Nebraska Games and Parks Commission. Nurseries and farm supply stores are sources of plantings.

Not Too Far

Now that you're headed in the right direction, don't go too far too fast, says Gipson.

"It's easy to become overenthusiastic and develop a jungle of shrubbery, actually excluding many species of birds, and making it impossible to observe wildlife that may visit your home," he said.

He went on, "Variety is critical to attracting wildlife. A few larger trees such as red oaks, cottonwoods and maples will provide nesting sites for some birds and squirrels. Smaller trees such as autumn olive and serviceberry will provide food most of othe year.

For the tool-handy backyardsman, artificial nesting sites and feeders are effective. Nest boxes and feeders for squirrels and songbirds may be constructed from scrap lumber.

Construction plans are available in many books in the public library.

Once the feeders are built, Gipson added, remember: "Be patient. Try to put feeders and boxes near trees, shrubbery or under eaves to provide shelter. Wild animals and birds need places to hide from enemies and protection against wind, snow and ice."

Be patient when your feeders and nest boxes are new. Birds and wild mammals are shy and it takes time for them to discover the food supply. Depending on where you live, six to eight species of birds and a variety of small mammals should visit your feeders the first year and two or three new species each year for about five years.

Gipson also recommended that homeowners keep a list of birds and mammals that visit their feeders and the types of feed used. He added, "You may also keep records of species using nesting boxes and the number of offspring produced."

Most birds and other wildlife are good neighbors, but Gipson warned that occasionally rabbits may damage gardens, squirrels may make a mess in the attic and birds such as blue jays may bully small, attractive song birds.

He said live traps (box-type traps that do not injure) are probably the best means of controlling wild mammals in town. Traps should be set near damaged sites, runways or protective cover. Confused animals may be carried outside of town and released where they will not cause problems.

Access Points

When animals are entering buildings, try to find access points and cover them with quarter-inch hardware cloth.

Troublesome birds are more difficult to handle. Live traps may be set for them, but they may return, even when released several miles away. Often it is necessary to accept some bad manners from birds such as blue jays; they are part of the natural system and aggressive behavior is to be expected.

There are positive and negative points to consider about feeding wildlife. Providing food attracts animals and makes observation possible. On the other hand, birds and even small mammals rapidly become dependent upon food provided by people.

If you start a feeding program during winter, be consistent. If you have to be away during periods of harsh weather, arrange to have a neighbor keep the feeders full.

Wild animals accustomed to eating at feeders may starve during periods of harsh weather if feed is not available. Squirrels accustomed to eating at a feeder may damage homes and storage buildings searching for food if feeders are not maintained.

Plants Should Have Labels

New York (UPI) — Care tags are just as important for plants as they are for clothing and home furnishings.

A recent article in "Home Furnishings Daily," a trade newspaper, quoted Les Meyers of Venturi Inc., speaking at a horticulture workshop here.

Meyers said plants sold at retail should have labels spelling out their needs for light, food, water and repotting.

He said a survey commissioned by the Plant Institute of America showed nearly a third of the 957 million plants sold last year died before the year ended, and only 15 % of the fatalities had care information attached at the point of purchase.

Meyers also said 68% of the people polled said care labeling was the most important piece of information they wanted

Garden Books Blossom All Over

By United Press International

Garden books are blossoming early this spring and even closet gardeners are included in the current crop of how-to books for urban, suburban and rural residents.

Closet gardening under lights is suggested by Duane Newcomb in The Apartment Farmer, (Tarcher-Hawthorn), $4.95 paper, $7.95 cloth) for that rare apartment dweller with an empty closet to spare.

His planters include plastic bags, a toy truck, a child's wagon, a pitcher, spittoon or a bookshelf on casters. He uses ordinary kitchen utensils, such as an ice cream scoop for making holes to transplant seedlings, and a small rolling pin for smoothing soil. His compost heap is a garbage can.

The offhand approach also distinguishes The Lazy Indoor Gardener, by Roberta Pliner (Random House, $3.95 paper), although her metier is more houseplants than edibles, and she failed to provide an index.

The Absolute Beginners' Book of House Plants, by Lee Lester (Citadel, $8.95) is just what the title says. The author is a retired greenhouse owner and holder of a gold medal from the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

At Least 100 Grasses Native to Nebraska

Nebraska's native grasses have been waving in the gusty prairie long before anyone ever thought of applying the Indian word "Nebraska" to the flatland

Native grasses have been in this area since the ice receded In fact, scientists have found some fossilized seed — you might say they are hardy

It s hard to list Nebraska's native grasses University of Nebraska agronomists working with the grasses estimate their numbers range from 100 to 150 species, and that 150 figure could even be low

20 or more species of native Nebraska grasses can be found in any piece of prairie It all depends on the soil, say the scientists Nebraska isn't hurting for pieces of prairie since 50% of the state's land area is in pasture and rangeland, and a good portion of that land carries native grasses

Other Reserves

Beyond the farming and ranching segment, other portions of the state are seeing to it that these grasses be preserved, no matter what direction the agricultural interests go Over 40,000 acres in the Sandhills have been designated a wilderness area, in which both the animals and vegetation will be allowed to go their natural ways

In the northwest corner of the state, the Oglala National Grasslands will preserve the grasses in that area, while a patch of prairie in Gage County is guarded dutifully by the University of Nebraska as part of the stipulations set down in memory of Mrs Dwight Dalbey

Most of the Sandhills are native grasses and other parts of the state remain native simply because the land is too steep to allow a plow access to it The western end of the state is losing more of its native grasses as wheat goes in Scientists speculate that the loss in grasses in the west is in direct proportion to wheat prices

Even though these grasses are obviously hardy, some varieties nearly disappeared during the 1930's drought. It could happen again with the dry weather continuing, but a few patches will always survive somewhere

Garden clubs are beginning to consider the native grasses as a possibility for ornamental plants, insuring the survival of a few more patches of native grasses

What are the surviving species and what do they look like? Here are a few that continue to thrive in Nebraska's relentless climate

—Buffalo grass is a low-growing spreading perennial that is an important pasture grass in western Nebraska Although it does not yield heavily, buffalo grass withstands drought and heavy grazing well and furnishes excellent winter grazing This grass can also be readily propagated by sodding

—Switchgrass, also called panic grass, is an erect, stout perennial commonly growing 2-5 feet tall This species is adapted to conditions where moisture is abundant and it grows commonly in valleys, ravines, draws and in similar areas receiving considerable runoff water

—Big bluestem grows from 3-6 feet high and develops a heavy sod Turkeyfoot and forked beardgrass are other common names It is best adapted to moist, well-drained soils It is an important species in the intensive subirrigated valleys of the Sandhills and grows commonly over the eastern one-third of the state

—Western wheatgrass is a rigid perennial with rough-surfaced bluish-green leaf blades It develops a coarse heavy sod Western wheatgrass is highly resistant to drought and cold and is one of the most tolerant grasses to alkali

Bluegrasses, Wheatgrasses Accompanied the Immigrants

When Nebraska's non-native grasses were introduced to the state, it took a translator to pronounce the name Some of them have been here since the late 1800 s and all have Americanized names, some so familiar you would think they were natives

For instance, the tall wheatgrass in the pastures and ranges migrated to the state from Turkey in 1936 and won over Nebraska farmers for its drought and cold resistance Bromegrass sounds as Nebraskan as buffalograss but its roots go back to Hungary and Russia, coming to Nebraska in 1888 Many of the wheatgrasses came from the USSR in the 1930 s Russian wild rye came over in 1927 from Omsk, USSR

But what about the green, green grass of home — the ever-present Kentucky bluegrass Imported all the way from Kentucky right? Wrong Kentucky bluegrass is a native of the Old World, it covers much of Eurasia No one knows for sure when it migrated over but the seed was brought by early colonists

Brent Hoadley, district Extension horticulturist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, breaks down the grasses into maintenance areas Minimum maintenance areas include bluegrasses like Arboretum, Delta, Delft, Kenblue, Park, and Troy, and other grasses like K-31 tall fescue, buffalograss, and zoysia Normal maintenance will be needed for tall fescue, creeping red fescue, and some bluegrasses High maintenance turf areas include the bluegrasses Merion, Prato, Nugget, and Nu-Dwarf, and the improved perennial ryegrasses Manhattan, Penfine, NK-100, Pelo, and Norlea

Mow at a 3-inch height for minimum maintenance, 1 inch for normal and fertilize in the spring and fall for minimum maintenance

The normal maintenance turfgrass grower must be a turf expert who wants to save time, money and the environment and still have an excellent lawn, said Hoadley He must know the approximate dates of arrival for leaf spot, adult billbugs, Fusarium blight, sod webworm, and various weeds

The high maintenance turfgrass area is a preventive approach to lawn maintenance A complete program of preventive pesticide applications, frequent low rate fertilizer applications, frequent clippings at low mowing heights and regular waterings are essential to this program Nothing is left to chance

Nebraska's native grasses have been waving in the gusty prairie long before anyone ever thought of applying the Indian word "Nebraska" to the flatland.

Native grasses have been in this area since the ice receded. In fact, scientists have found some fossilized seed — you might say they are hardy.

It's hard to list Nebraska's native grasses. University of Nebraska agronomists working with the grasses estimate their numbers range from 100 to 150 species, and that 150 figure could even be low.

20 or more species of native Nebraska grasses can be found in any piece of prairie. It all depends on the soil, say the scientists. Nebraska isn't hurting for pieces of prairie since 50% of the state's land area is in pasture and rangeland, and a good portion of that land carries native grasses.

Other Reserves

Beyond the farming and ranching segment, other portions of the state are seeing to it that these grasses be preserved, no matter what direction the agricultural interests go. Over 40,000 acres in the Sandhills have been designated a wilderness area, in which both the animals and vegetation will be allowed to go their natural ways.

In the northwest corner of the state, the Oglala National Grasslands will preserve the grasses in that area; while a patch of prairie in Gage County is guarded dutifully by the University of Nebraska as part of the stipulations set down in memory of Mrs. Dwight Dalbey.

Most of the Sandhills are native grasses and other parts of the state remain native simply because the land is too steep to allow a plow access to it. The western end of the state is losing more of its native grasses as wheat goes in. Scientists speculate that the loss in grasses in the west is in direct proportion to wheat prices.

Even though these grasses are obviously hardy, some varieties nearly disappeared during the 1930's drought. It could happen again with the dry weather continuing, but a few patches will always survive somewhere.

Garden clubs are beginning to consider the native grasses as a possibility for ornamental plants, insuring the survival of a few more patches of native grasses.

What are the surviving species and what do they look like? Here are a few that continue to thrive in Nebraska's relentless climate:

—Buffalo grass is a low-growing spreading perennial that is an important pasture grass in western Nebraska. Although it does not yield heavily, buffalo grass withstands drought and heavy grazing well and furnishes excellent winter grazing. This grass can also be readily propagated by sodding.

—Switchgrass, also called panic grass, is an erect, stout perennial commonly growing 2-5 feet tall. This species is adapted to conditions where moisture is abundant and it grows commonly in valleys, ravines, draws and in similar areas receiving considerable runoff water.

—Big bluestem grows from 3-6 feet high and develops a heavy sod. Turkeyfoot and forked beardgrass are other common names. It is best adapted to moist, well-drained soils. It is an important species in the intensive subirrigated valleys of the Sandhills and grows commonly over the eastern one-third of the state.

—Western wheatgrass is a rigid perennial with rough-surfaced bluish-green leaf blades. It develops a coarse heavy sod. Western wheatgrass is highly resistant to drought and cold and is one of the most tolerant grasses to alkali.

Bluegrasses, Wheatgrasses Accompanied the Immigrants

When Nebraska's non-native grasses were introduced to the state, it took a translator to pronounce the name. Some of them have been here since the late 1800's and all have Americanized names, some so familiar you would think they were natives.

For instance, the tall wheatgrass in the pastures and ranges migrated to the state from Turkey in 1936 and won over Nebraska farmers for its drought and cold resistance. Bromegrass sounds as Nebraskan as buffalograss but its roots go back to Hungary and Russia, coming to Nebraska in 1838. Many of the wheatgrasses came from the USSR in the 1930's. Russian wild rye came over in 1927 from Omsk, USSR.

But what about the green, green grass of home — the ever-present Kentucky bluegrass. Imported all the way from Kentucky, right? Wrong. Kentucky bluegrass is a native of the Old World, it covers much of Eurasia. No one knows for sure when it migrated over but the seed was brought by early colonists.

Brent Hoadley, district Extension horticulturist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, breaks down the grasses into maintenance areas. Minimum maintenance areas include bluegrasses like Arboretum, Delta, Delft, Kenblue, Park, and Troy, and other grasses like K-31 tall fescue, buffalograss, and zoysia. Normal maintenance will be needed for tall fescue, creeping red fescue, and some bluegrasses. High maintenance turf areas include the bluegrasses Merion, Prato, Nugget, and Nu-Dwarf; and the improved perennial ryegrasses Manhattan, Penfine, NK-100, Pelo, and Norlea.

Mow at a 3-inch height for minimum maintenance, 1 inch for normal and fertilize in the spring and fall for minimum maintenance.

The normal maintenance turfgrass grower must be a turf expert who wants to save time, money and the environment and still have an excellent lawn, said Hoadley. He must know the approximate dates of arrival for leaf spot, adult billbugs, Fusarium blight, sod webworm, and various weeds.

The high maintenance turfgrass area is a preventive approach to lawn maintenance. A complete program of preventive pesticide applications, frequent low rate fertilizer applications, frequent clippings at low mowing heights and regular waterings are essential to this program. Nothing is left to chance.

Trail Rider Disappointed

By J. L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

The head scout of a group of seven horsemen who retraced the Oregon Trail last year as a bicentennial project says he has learned a lot about Midwesterners' attitudes toward their heritage

Allen Maybee, a former school teacher, has taken to lecturing and preparing for yet another ride, perhaps across Europe on horseback as a bicentennial goodwill ambassador, he told a group of Lincolnites earlier this week

Maybee, his 13-year-old son Chuck and five others made the journey from Independence, Mo., to Oregon City, Ore., last year "to get people thinking about the bicentennial"

Now he criticizes some of that spirit he helped promote by noting that some people are "ripping off the whole thing"

(Before and after the lecture Maybee's son sold authentic Oregon Trail ride T-shirts for $4 and "original bicentennial envelopes" for a dollar)

A case in point, he said, is the Bicentennial Wagon Train, currently heading across Nebraska en route to Philadelphia Maybee termed the wagon train "a classic example of mismanagement"

Sleep In Campers

"Those people don't carry provisions in their wagons, they even sleep in campers," said the veteran of last year's grueling 2,200 mile ride which saw its participants sleeping in bedrolls on the ground

"They should've just started out in a group of Winnebago motor homes," he said "It would have been about as realistic"

Records indicate that for every 50 yards on the Oregon Trail an unfortunate victim of an accident disease or some other calamity can be found, Maybee said He noted that his group left many artifacts untouched along the way, in keeping with the philosophy of an old friend in western Nebraska

That oldtimer, Paul Henderson, now in his late 70s, has studied the Oregon Trail since he was 14, Maybee said

Hopes Trail Egnored

Now he says that "the only salvation for the Oregon Trail is for people to forget it," Maybee said

Henderson drew the United States maps which served as the official guide for the seven horseback riders "He s been offered more than $7,000 for them," Maybee said, but "he doesn t want the money"

Henderson staked out the Pony Express trail through Wyoming, for free, although the state paid for his supplies, Maybee said

He wanted to do the same for Nebraska, but was told that the state wasn't interested, Maybee reported A similar defeat was suffered when he attempted to mark the old Deadwood-Sidney stage lines across parts of western Nebraska

Not Even Gas Money

'They wouldn t even give him gas money," Maybee complained

Parts of the Oregon Trail run across Bureau of Land Management lands Maybee said, but, unfortunately, not a lot of that is in Nebraska

Eastern Nebraska is especially remiss in failing to realize the value of preservation when it comes to land use and abuse he added The group found the Oregon Trail rather difficult to find in parts of southeast and south central Nebraska for this very reason Maybee said

The last straw for Maybee came when one of the group s horse was shot at and hit in the leg in Oregon after 'some verbal battling with some anti-bicentennial people'

No charges were ever filed in the incident and the horse suffered only minor injuries, but "the whole thing really made us paranoid," he said

Almost Afraid To Ride

"We were almost afraid to ride the last 15 miles into Oregon City for fear somebody would really try to stop us and ruin the trip," he said

Maybee who admitted that the Oregon Trail trip had been a personal dream since junior high said that the "bicentennial just sort of landed in my lap with $3 500 to spend and three months to do it'

He said that he and his traveling companions have talked about doing the trail ride over again, but taking at least six months the next time

'There s just too much to see and feel to do it in 30 miles a day," he concluded

Footsore Dog Resumed Trip Wearing Rawhide Mocassins

They're writing a children's book about Bo, the Australian Blue Shepherd dog who walked from Independence, Mo., to North Platte, and then sat down and wouldn t budge

A team of horses couldn't make him move said his owner Allen Maybee of Scottsbluff, the head scout of a group of horsemen who rode the old Oregon Trail from Independence to Oregon last summer

"For every 20 miles we rode, that crazy dog ran about 25,' Maybee said

'His natural herding instincts really helped keep our group of Arabian horses in line, though," he added

Why wouldn't he budge? "Well, it had us bothered until we got him to roll over and we looked at his paws and saw that he had just worn the pads off of them," Maybe said

' So we fashioned four leather mocassins out of rawhide and that felt better and he took off again and never complained again until he got hit by a truck in Oregon, but lived through it," Maybe added

Such were the humorous experiences of the buckskinned group which drew stares wherever they went especially in the concrete canyons of the big city

' Part of the Oregon Trail goes right through the golf course in Kansas City," Maybee said, "and we picked Ladies Day and were confronted by 50 middle-aged ladies in Bermuda shorts complete with their varicose veins I imagine the sight of us riding through the bushes was scary for them, though"

In Topeka, Maybee said the mayor met them in front of city hall with some "surprises" "When we left, our horses had left some surprises for him too" Maybee said

Maybee s horse earned the name Tasmanian Devil, from its nature and antics when it came time for new shoes When the blacksmith would lift a leg to shoe the hoof the horse would lay down on its side, he explained

Sometimes it would take all seven of us to get him back up," he added, "until somebody discovered that putting a spoonful of water in his ear made him think he was drowning and he d jump right up

Opening lead - queen of hearts.

Let's assume you're in six clubs and West leads a heart. If you were a beginner, you might estimate your chances of making the slam at 50 per cent. You could reason there was an even chance that West was dealt the king of diamonds, in which case finessing dummy's queen would land the slam half the time

But if you were a more experienced player, you would view your chances much more optimistically, in fact, you might even jack them up to 90 per cent You would be aware of other promising possibilities and would not rely solely on finding West with the king of diamonds

You'd win the heart lead with the ace, draw two rounds of trumps, play a spade to the king, and ruff a heart. You'd then play a spade to the ace and ruff a spade, hoping for a 3-3 division. But you would not be overly concerned if they weren't because, after East-West had both followed suit on the A-K of spades, even Lloyd's of London would be glad to insure the slam for a very nominal premium.

In the actual case, after ruffing the third spade, you would lead a diamond to the A-Q-9

If West followed low, you'd finesse the nine, compelling East to win and make a losing return — whatever he played back. A spade would establish dummy's last spade as a trick, a heart would allow you to discard a diamond as you ruffed in dummy, a diamond would be right into dummy's A-Q

West could not foil you by inserting the jack on your diamond lead to the A-Q-9 You would cover the jack with the queen and so place East in the same helpless position.

Burma Takes All The Blame

Burma (UPI) — Burma is blaming itself for a decrease in tourism during 1975

The official government party newspaper said "the tourist industry has not proved to be a good foreign exchange earner," noting that the number of tourists during 1975 was only 341 more than 1974's total of 17,312

The newspaper said, "The main reasons for the slow progress of tourism in Burma are the short periods of visas granted tourists inconvenience caused by the lack of prompt transportation and visitors complaints of substandard food

But you would not be overly concerned if they weren't because, after East-West had both followed suit on the A-K of spades, even Lloyd's of London would be glad to insure the slam for a very nominal premium.

In the actual case, after ruffing the third spade, you would lead a diamond to the A-Q-9.

If West followed low, you'd finesse the nine, compelling East to win and make a losing return — whatever he played back. A spade would establish dummy's last spade as a trick; a heart would allow you to discard a diamond as you ruffed in dummy; a diamond would be right into dummy's A-Q.

West could not foil you by inserting the jack on your diamond lead to the A-Q-9. You would cover the jack with the queen and so place East in the same helpless position.

Burma Takes All The Blame

Burma (UPI) — Burma is blaming itself for a decrease in tourism during 1975.

The official government party newspaper said "the tourist industry has not proved to be a good foreign exchange earner," noting that the number of tourists during 1975 was only 341 more than 1974's total of 17,312.

The newspaper said, "The main reasons for the slow progress of tourism in Burma are the short periods of visas granted tourists, inconvenience caused by the lack of prompt transportation" and visitors' complaints of substandard food.

Death Impolite Topic

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

"Death," according to Dr. Earl A. Grollman, "is not discussed in polite society. It is the new 'four-letter' word."

Grollman, a pioneer in the field of crisis intervention and thanatology (study of death), was in Lincoln Tuesday to speak to the Nebraska Funeral Directors Association and members of the Lincoln Grief Center.

The topic of death is so distasteful most people don't have a will, haven't selected a burial plot or discussed a preference for a particular funeral home in the event a death occurs in the family, he said.

Since people generally are afraid to confront the subject of death forthrightly, Grollman said, "when someone dies family members have to make all kinds of determinations within a day."

And because discussions on death are taboo, the Bostonian said children have an especially difficult time understanding death.

"Should children go to funerals? I think they should, if you tell them what to expect," Grollman continued. "Psychologically, it is much better to participate in the actual separation than to fantasize about it."

Cautioning parents to first explain death to themselves before trying to explain it to children, Grollman said parents should answer honestly their children's questions about death.

"You should let them understand it when it is not threatening," he said. "Let them visit a funeral home, a cemetery. They go to the firehouse, don't they?"

Hesitancy to face the reality of death could be overcome, he said, if more open discussions about death were present in the school environment.

"Death is as much a reality as drug abuse," Grollman said, and death education should be a part of the curriculum. "Almost every book talks about death in some way" and could be used as a means for open discussions about death.

However, Grollman said, "great strides are being made" when it comes to understanding and coping with death.

An indicator of this new trend, he said, are grief centers, such as the one in Lincoln, which are being established across the country to help people cope with death.

More university classes about death are being offered and death workshops are drawing increasing numbers of participants.

This process of education about death is important, he said, "because we experience little deaths every day through moves from one community to another, retirements, divorces or the marriage of our children."

Odd Translation Crichton's Latest

books by Cynthia Johnson

There is something about Michael Crichton's new book, "Eaters of the Dead" (Knopf), that makes you wonder if there isn't something more.

Up to now, Crichton has done so well.

He has a string of highly successful, substantive books to his credit: "The Andromeda Strain," "The Terminal Man," "The Great Train Robbery."

It is thus with great anticipation that Crichton fans will pick up "Eaters of the Dead."

From page one on, they will look for some of the old Crichton — the suspense, the drama, the nerve-jangling episodes.

But they won't find any of that.

Instead they will find an annotated version of a translation of a 10th century Arabian manuscript.

It is not too enthralling. Not even after you've read the appendix, which is apparently designed to lend some sort of interest to all that goes before.

The manuscript in question was written by one Ahmad Ibn Fadlan who, in 921 A.D., was sent by the Caliph of Bagdad as an ambassador to the king of the Bulgars.

As Crichton writes in his introduction, "Ibn Fadlan was gone three years on his journey and never actually accomplished his mission, for along the way he encountered a company of Norsemen and had many adventures among them."

According to the author, Ibn Fadlan's account of his experience "represents the earliest known eyewitness account of Viking life and society."

If you like to read about the length of the Norsemen's bows, the dimensins of their fortifications and the manner in which they treated wounds, you'll love "Eaters of the Dead."

And if you liked "Beowulf," you'll probably appreciate the tales Ibn Fadlan tells of the monsters of the "black mist."

Condensed, the story looks like this: Ibn Fadlan is captured by a group of Norsemen who take him along on a journey to the kingdom of Rothgar, where terrifying creatures are holding the citizens at bay.

Coming forth under the cover of darkenss and a phenomenon knownas "the black mist," the creatures are described as fiends "who murder and kill and eat the flesh of human beings."

After several battles, the Norseman and their Arab compatriot defeat the creatures; Ibn Fadlan is allowed to return to his homeland.

In the appendix to the book, Crichton says that there is some evidence which indicates that the "fiends" described by Ibn Fadlan may in fact have been Neanderthal men.

Since the 19th century, scholars have believed that the Neandertahl man disappered some 35,000 years ago.

However, Crichton says beliefs about the Neandertahl man are now being reassessed. And, he continues, "the general reassessment . . . coincides with the rediscovery of Ibn Fadlan's contact with the 'mist monsters.'"

Ibn Fadlan's description of the creatures "is suggestive of Neanderthal anatomy, and raises the question of whether the Neanderthal form did, in fact, disappear from the earth thousands of years ago, or whether these early men persisted into historic times."

Interesting enough, perhaps, for those interested in anthropology, or those who don't mind reading rather tedious accounts of 10th century adventures.

But for most Crichton fans, this latest book will not be satisfying. It has the smell of something that might appear on a professor's requried reading list — commendable for some purposes, but not good bedtime reading.

Reader Believes Confession Only Salvation

DEAR ABBY: So now you are giving spiritual advice? Who are you to say that a husband and wife should not confess the sin of infidelity to one another.

When one has broken the sacred marriage vows, the only way to make proper restitution is to make a full confession to the betrayed spouse and to ask for forgiveness from the wronged one.

If my mate sins against me, he should confess his sin to ME! It is my forgiveness that he needs in order to cleanse his soul. I think you should print a retraction, Abby. Many people take your advice seriously.

SAVED IN STAUNTON, VA.

DEAR SAVED: I believe that a "confession" that will hurt an innocent party should be withheld. There are better ways of making restitution, such as prayer, keeping a silent vow never to repeat the act and a special measure of kindness and consideration to the one betrayed.

The punishment is more severe when the guilt is borne in silence by the guilty one. There is nothing "noble" about cleansing one's conscience in the tears of another.

Read on for a surprising letter from a reader who shares my views:

DEAR ABBY: Of all the despicable people I will ever have to contend with, deliver me from the "kiss-and-tell" hypocrite.

Confessions to clear the conscience? Rubbish! Most confessions of infidelity are motivated (sometimes unconsciously) by the desire to injure the innocent party, and/or the wish to boast.

Confession to the Lord is good. Likewise, confession to a clergyman. Even to the bartender or the barber. But never to the one who will be hurt to hear it.

To break one's marriage vows is a mortal sin. But it is a human weakness, and the flesh is sometimes weak. But to inflict needless pain on an innocent part is also a sin.

Christ has been known to forgive the adulterer. ("Go forth, and sin no more.") But Christ had no good words for the hypocrite.

Who am I? A clergyman who once, many years ago, confessed his infidelity to his wife.

REGRETS APLENTY

DEAR ABBY: I was married before and so was Bill. We have been married for three years and get along fine. I happened to mention to Bill that I had two plots bought and paid for in the cemetery right here in Louisville, Ky. Bill said he would rather by buried in New Albany, Ind.

Bill left New Albany years ago because he didn't like it, so how come he wants to go back there to be buried?

I told him that we belonged together, and he said if I felt the way about it, I'd agree to be buried in New Albany with him.

Abby, I don't have a thing to do in New Albany. Why, my whole family is in Louisville, and that's where I want to be buried.

We are both in our 50s and have a lot of time to settle this, but I'd just like your opinion on who is right?

LOVES LOUISVILLE

DEAR LOVES: Does Bill have two plots bought and paid for in New Albany? If not, he might just as well get down to earth in Louisville.

Court Use Of Tax Funds For Industrial Land Illegal

By United Press International

The Nebraska Supreme Court Wednesday declared unconstitutional a 1972 change in the state's 1961 Industrial Development Act which allowed cities and counties, directly or through chambers of commerce, to buy land for industrial development purposes using tax money.

The court said the law violated the constitutional barrier to lending the credit of a governmental subdivision to a private business.

The unanimous decision reversed in part a Douglas County District Court decision in a taxpayer suit filed by James Chase of Omaha that the development act was constitutional.

The Supreme Court upheld the lower court's decision that the remainder of the law, which authorizes use of public money for promotional and publicity purposes, is constitutional. That portion of the law was originally enacted in concept in 1921.

The lawsuit stemmed from contributions of $50,000 each by Douglas County and the cityu of Omaha to the Greater Omaha Chamber of Commerce generally for industrial development.

Chase, in addition to a constitutionality ruling, sought a refund of the contributions. The Supreme Court said it could not determine whether any money had been used for land which might be subject to a refund request and remanded the case to the district court to find out.

The Greater Omaha Chamber of Commerce said Wednesday, however, none of the money was used for land purchases. The chamber said all the money was used for publicity campaigns and promotional programs.

The Supreme Court said the problem is that in order for land to be put to industrial use as intended by the law, it must first come into the use and possession of private persons or an organization which may engage in industry.

"We have been directed by the defendants to no statutes which authorize cities or counties to engage generally in the operation of an industry," said the court.

Therefore, the court concluded, the law "results in capital being furnished by the city or county for private use" and violates the prohibition against lending the credit of the state or its political subdivisions to private persons or groups.

The court elaborated on certain features of such a situation saying if the land acquired decreased in value the city or county would have to stand the loss. Conversely, if the land increased in value the gain would be to the benefit of the private organization or person.

Left on the books as constitutional was a provision which allows cities and counties to contribute money to chambers of commerce for publicity and promotional purposes.

Specifically authorized are expenditures to encourage immigration and new industries and for publicity campaigns for such things as acquiring a municipal electrical distribution system, as well as advertising agricultural, manufacturing, commercial and other resources.

Lincoln Chamber Not Affected

The Lincoln Chamber of Commerce has never used tax funds to buy land for industrial development.

Chamber Director Duane Vicary said Wednesday that the chamber won't be affected by a State Supreme Court ruling handed down Wednesday. The court upheld a portion of the law authorizing the use of tax funds for promotional purposes, but struck down a portion of the law which allowed the chamber to use tax funds to buy land.

The chamber does use tax funds for promoting industrial developement. This year the city,/through the Lincoln Electric System, earmarked $13,500 for that fund. The county set aside $5,000 and the airport authority budgeted $2,500 for the chamber's promotional fund.

Ruling On Title To Land, Island Upheld

By United Press International

The Nebraska Supreme Court Wednesday upheld a lower court decision to grant Lyle Winkle undisputed title to land and an island in and between the old and new channels of the Platte River near Columbus.

Both courts declared invalid a sheriff's deed issued in 1935 to James Mitera to a portion of the land. The sheriff's deed was the result of a tax foreclosure.

However, both courts said, the foreclosure was invalid because the owner of record at the time, one Walt Giger, was not informed of the action.

The island is known as Giger's Island. Giger, who sold the land and island in 1958, used the island for hunting and fishing.

In other cases the Supreme Court:

—Upheld the Douglas County District Court's decision to sentence Earthel Crisp to a prison term of 4-12 years for assault with intent to commit rape.
—reversed
— upheld the Douglas County District Court's decision to sentence Earthel Crisp to a prison term of 4-12 years for assault with intent to commit rape.
— reversed and remanded to the Nance County District Court for further proceedings a child support dispute between Arlyce and Leland Hanson
— agreed with the Buffalo County District Court's dismissal of a real estate dispute between the First National Bank of Kearney and Marlene Bunn.
— affirmed the Scotts Bluff County District Court's decision in favor of Delmer Zweygardt in an insurance coverage dispute filed against Farmers Mutual Insurance Co of Nebraska.
— upheld the terms of a divorce decree issued by the Scotts Bluff County District Court to Marilyn and Donald Lynch

Curtis Suggests Medicare Rule Change

By United Press International

U.S. Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R-Neb., said Wednesday there is a solution short of legislation to a problem that prompted a spokesman for 25 Nebraska hospitals to charge that non-Medicare, non-welfare patients were being "ripped off" to the tune of $2.5 million.

The problem stems from Medicare regulations which Darold Hendee, Sidney hospital administrator and spokesman for the 25, said last month penalized institutions which offered both hospital and nursing home care.

Hendee, in releasing detailed financial information on the hospitals to prove their point, said legislative changes in the Medicare law were apparently needed.

"The problem can be corrected by a change in Medicare regulations," Curtis said in a telephone interview Wednesday. He added he would consider legislation if a negotiating session scheduled for next month involving Social Security Administration officials, John Kern of the Senate Finance Committee staff and hospital representatives yields no agreement.

Kern, the senator said, is a recently hired hospital specialist.

Hendee had said politicians and government officials, prior to the association's contact with Curtis, didn't believe there was a problem.

Curtis said "they do now recognize that a serious problem does exist." He said the Social Security officials will be bringing to Nebraska for the meeting in Lincoln next month proposed changes in regulations. He also said the finance committee is working on a proposal that would, in the future, encourage joint hospital and nursing home facilities.

The senator said the proposal is aimed at areas where there is a shortage of nursing home care.

The current regulations causing the problem require hospitals to average the generally higher costs of hospital care with the lower costs of nursing home care.

Hendee said the result has been Medicare payments lower than actual costs, which means paying patients had to pick up the tab for their own care and help pay the difference between cost and medicare payments for non-paying hospital patients.

Hendee said the alternative to a change in payment regulations was the one that Cozad finally was forced to make. Cozad closed its nursing unit.

Sidney Memorial, which has a nursing unit, last year lost $101,000 in hospital operations because of the regulations.

Court Use Of Tax Funds For Industrial Land Illegal

By United Press International

The Nebraska Supreme Court Wednesday declared unconstitutional a 1972 change in the state's 1961 Industrial Development Act which allowed cities and counties, directly or through chambers of commerce, to buy land for industrial development purposes using tax money.

The court said the law violated the constitutional barrier to lending the credit of a governmental subdivision to a private business.

The unanimous decision reversed in part a Douglas County District Court decision in a taxpayer suit filed by James Chase of Omaha that the development act was constitutional.

The Supreme Court upheld the lower court's decision that the remainder of the law, which authorizes use of public money for promotional and publicity purposes, is constitutional. That portion of the law was originally enacted in concept in 1921.

The lawsuit stemmed from contributions of $50,000 each by Douglas County and the cityu of Omaha to the Greater Omaha Chamber of Commerce generally for industrial development.

Chase, in addition to a constitutionality ruling, sought a refund of the contributions. The Supreme Court said it could not determine whether any money had been used for land which might be subject to a refund request and remanded the case to the district court to find out.

The Greater Omaha Chamber of Commerce said Wednesday, however, none of the money was used for land purchases. The chamber said all the money was used for publicity campaigns and promotional programs.

The Supreme Court said the problem is that in order for land to be put to industrial use as intended by the law, it must first come into the use and possession of private persons or an organization which may engage in industry.

"We have been directed by the defendants to no statutes which authorize cities or counties to engage generally in the operation of an industry," said the court.

Therefore, the court concluded, the law "results in capital being furnished by the city or county for private use" and violates the prohibition against lending the credit of the state or its political subdivisions to private persons or groups.

The court elaborated on certain features of such a situation saying if the land acquired decreased in value the city or county would have to stand the loss. Conversely, if the land increased in value the gain would be to the benefit of the private organization or person.

Left on the books as constitutional was a provision which allows cities and counties to contribute money to chambers of commerce for publicity and promotional purposes.

Specifically authorized are expenditures to encourage immigration and new industries and for publicity campaigns for such things as acquiring a municipal electrical distribution system, as well as advertising agricultural, manufacturing, commercial and other resources.

Lincoln Chamber Not Affected

The Lincoln Chamber of Commerce has never used tax funds to buy land for industrial development.

Chamber Director Duane Vicary said Wednesday that the chamber won't be affected by a State Supreme Court ruling handed down Wednesday. The court upheld a portion of the law authorizing the use of tax funds for promotional purposes, but struck down a portion of the law which allowed the chamber to use tax funds to buy land.

The chamber does use tax funds for promoting industrial developement. This year the city, through the Lincoln Electric System, earmarked $13,500 for that fund. The county set aside $5,000 and the airport authority budgeted $2,500 for the chamber's promotional fund.

Ruling On Title To Land, Island Upheld

By United Press International

The Nebraska Supreme Court Wednesday upheld a lower court decision to grant Lyle Winkle undisputed title to land and an island in and between the old and new channels of the Platte River near Columbus.

Both courts declared invalid a sheriff's deed issued in 1935 to James Mitera to a portion of the land. The sheriff's deed was the result of a tax foreclosure.

However, both courts said, the foreclosure was invalid because the owner of record at the time, one Walt Giger, was not informed of the action.

The island is known as Giger's Island. Giger, who sold the land and island in 1958, used the island for hunting and fishing.

In other cases the Supreme Court:

—Upheld the Douglas County District Court's decision to sentence Earthel Crisp to a prison term of 4-12 years for assault with intent to commit rape.
—reversed
— upheld the Douglas County District Court's decision to sentence Earthel Crisp to a prison term of 4-12 years for assault with intent to commit rape.
— reversed and remanded to the Nance County District Court for further proceedings a child support dispute between Arlyce and Leland Hanson.
— agreed with the Buffalo County District Court's dismissal of a real estate dispute between the First National Bank of Kearney and Mariene Bunn.
— affirmed the Scotts Bluff County District Court's decision in favor of Delmer Zweygardt in an insurance coverage dispute filed against Farmers Mutual Insurance Co. of Nebraska.
— upheld the terms of a divorce decree issued by the Scotts Bluff County District Court to Marilyn and Donald Lynch.

Curtis Suggests Medicare Rule Change

By United Press International

U.S. Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R-Neb., said Wednesday there is a solution short of legislation to a problem that prompted a spokesman for 25 Nebraska hospitals to charge that non-Medicare, non-welfare patients were being "ripped off" to the tune of $2.5 million.

The problem stems from Medicare regulations which Darold Hendee, Sidney hospital administrator and spokesman for the 25, said last month penalized institutions which offered both hospital and nursing home care.

Hendee, in releasing detailed financial information on the hospitals to prove their point, said legislative changes in the Medicare law were apparently needed.

"The problem can be corrected by a change in Medicare regulations," Curtis said in a telephone interview Wednesday. He added he would consider legislation if a negotiating session scheduled for next month involving Social Security Administration officials, John Kern of the Senate Finance Committee staff and hospital representatives yields no agreement.

Kern, the senator said, is a recently hired hospital specialist.

Hendee had said politicians and government officials, prior to the association's contact with Curtis, didn't believe there was a problem.

Curtis said "they do now recognize that a serious problem does exist." He said the Social Security officials will be bringing to Nebraska for the meeting in Lincoln next month proposed changes in regulations. He also said the finance committee is working on a proposal that would, in the future, encourage joint hospital and nursing home facilities.

The senator said the proposal is aimed at areas where there is a shortage of nursing home care.

The current regulations causing the problem require hospitals to average the generally higher costs of hospital care with the lower costs of nursing home care.

Hendee said the result has been Medicare payments lower than actual costs, which means paying patients had to pick up the tab for their own care and help pay the difference between cost and medicare payments for non-paying hospital patients.

Hendee said the alternative to a change in payment regulations was the one that Cozad finally was forced to make. Cozad closed its nursing unit.

Sidney Memorial, which has a nursing unit, last year lost $101,000 in hospital operations because of the regulations.

Survey Shows:

Kennedy Still First Choice Of Democrats, Independents

By LOUIS HARRIS

Although many believe that the Democratic choice for the presidential nomination will finally be made between former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter and Minnesota Sen. Hubert Humphrey, the latest Harris Survey shows that Mass. Sen. Edward Kennedy defeats both frontrunners. In direct pairings among Democrats and independents, Kennedy wins over Humphrey by 47-42% and holds a 49-43% edge over Carter. Just among Democrats, Kennedy runs 49-42% ahead of Humphrey and 54-39% ahead of Carter.

When Carter and Humphrey are pitted against each other, Humphrey wins by a 48-43% margin. This marks no change from last month. Among Democrats alone, however, Humphrey increases his lead to 53-39% over the former Georgia governor.

Of course, the three Democrats tested each have a different status in this campaign. Carter not only is a declared candidate, but also is out running hard for delegates in all the primaries. Humphrey has been an active non-declared candidate who has made his availability for the Democratic nomination widely known. Kennedy has not been active and has declared time and again that he will not be a candidate this year.

However, in a deadlocked Democratic convention in New York City next July, there would undoubtedly be strong pressures on Kennedy to change his mind. Because of this possibility, the Harris Survey chose to put Kennedy into this latest test, as much as this might complicate an already confused and unclear Democratic contest for the nomination.

Louis Harris

Leads Both Frontrunners

Humphrey leads Carter as the preferred choice in every region except the South, where the former Georgia governor holds a convincing 58-35% lead. The vote among whites is very close, but Humphrey fashions his lead by winning the votes of blacks by 59-35%. However, in last month's comparable pairing, Humphrey held an even wider 68-26% lead among blacks over Carter. Thus, it appears that Carter's "ethnic purity" remarks have not hurt him among the rank and file of black Democrats and independents. Nonetheless, Humphrey, rather than Carter, is the real choice of blacks.

Significantly, when the Humphrey and Carter vote is broken down by other potential candidates in the race, it is clear that Humphrey is nearly everyone's second choice. For example, among people who prefer Kennedy, Humphrey wins over Carter by 60-35%. Among those who prefer Jackson, Humphrey also wins by 66-28%.

The real exceptions to this general rule are those whose first choice is George Wallace: By 57-29%, these voters prefer Carter over Humphrey.

The key to Sen. Kennedy's strength is his ability to win the support of the blacks, the young people and union members against either Carter or Humphrey. For example, among young people, Kennedy wins over Carter by 56-38%. Among blacks, Kennedy defeats Humphrey by 68-26%. Among union members, Kennedy edges out Humphrey by 47-45%.

The Democratic contest in the primaries is only part of the total story of this nomination process. Both Humphrey and Kennedy cast long shadows over Carter's presidential hopes. Obviously, as far as the rank and file of Democratic voters are concerned, both Kennedy and Humphrey are formidable elements in this presidential race and likely will be heard from before the final decision is made in July at Madison Square Garden.

Survey Shows:

Kennedy Still First Choice Of Democrats, Independents

By LOUIS HARRIS

Although many believe that the Democratic choice for the presidential nomination will finally be made between former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter and Minnesota Sen. Hubert Humphrey, the latest Harris Survey shows that Mass. Sen. Edward Kennedy defeats both frontrunners. In direct pairings among Democrats and independents, Kennedy wins over Humphrey by 47-42% and holds a 49-43% edge over Carter. Just among Democrats, Kennedy runs 49-42% ahead of Humphrey and 54-39% ahead of Carter.

When Carter and Humphrey are pitted against each other, Humphrey wins by a 48-43% margin. This marks no change from last month. Among Democrats alone, however, Humphrey increases his lead to 53-39% over the former Georgia governor.

Of course, the three Democrats tested each have a different status in this campaign. Carter not only is a declared candidate, but also is out running hard for delegates in all the primaries. Humphrey has been an active non-declared candidate who has made his availability for the Democratic nomination widely known. Kennedy has not been active and has declared time and again that he will not be a candidate this year.

However, in a deadlocked Democratic convention in New York City next July, there would undoubtedly be strong pressures on Kennedy to change his mind. Because of this possibility, the Harris Survey chose to put Kennedy into this latest test, as much as this might complicate an already confused and unclear Democratic contest for the nomination.

Leads Both Frontrunners

Humphrey leads Carter as the preferred choice in every region except the South, where the former Georgia governor holds a convincing 58-35% lead. The vote among whites is very close, but Humphrey fashions his lead by winning the votes of blacks by 59-35%. However, in last month's comparable pairing, Humphrey held an even wider 68-26% lead among blacks over Carter. Thus, it appears that Carter's "ethnic purity" remarks have not hurt him among the rank and file of black Democrats and independents. Nonetheless, Humphrey, rather than Carter, is the real choice of blacks.

Significantly, when the Humphrey and Carter vote is broken down by other potential candidates in the race, it is clear that Humphrey is nearly everyone's second choice. For example, among people who prefer Kennedy, Humphrey wins over Carter by 60-35%. Among those who prefer Jackson, Humphrey also wins by 66-28%.

The real exceptions to this general rule are those whose first choice is George Wallace: By 57-29%, these voters prefer Carter over Humphrey.

The key to Sen. Kennedy's strength is his ability to win the support of the blacks, the young people and union members against either Carter or Humphrey. For example, among young people, Kennedy wins over Carter by 56-38%. Among blacks, Kennedy defeats Humphrey by 68-26%. Among union members, Kennedy edges out Humphrey by 47-45%.

The Democratic contest in the primaries is only part of the total story of this nomination process. Both Humphrey and Kennedy cast long shadows over Carter's presidential hopes. Obviously, as far as the rank and file of Democratic voters are concerned, both Kennedy and Humphrey are formidable elements in this presidential race and likely will be heard from before the final decision is made in July at Madison Square Garden.

Campus Mass Ban Is Upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court has upheld a Delaware state court decision blocking the University of Delaware's efforts to prevent Roman Catholic chaplains from saying Mass on campus.

The upheld court decision maintained that prohibiting religious services on campuses violated freedom of religion of students unless a "compelling state interest" could be shown for such a restriction.

Dow Close Is Highest In 3 Years

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock traders brushed aside the pressure of profit taking Wednesday and pushed the Dow Jones industrial average to its highest close in more than three years.

The widely followed average of 30 major industrial company stocks rose 7.56 to 1,011.02—its highest close since it finished at 1,018.66 on Jan. 23, 1973.

The Dow wavered as low as 1,006 during the session as some investors cashed in on the profits they accumulated in its rise of more than 28 points in the previous three trading days.

In the last hour of trading, the Dow rose almost five points.

Advancing New York Stock Exchange issues led those declining by an 8-5 margin, and the exchange's composite index of all its listed common stocks climbed .24 to 55 even.

A major influence on the market was the continuing flow of reports of higher corporate profits in the first three months of the year.

"The earnings have been consistently outstanding and dividend increases quite common," analyst Robert Stovall of Reynolds Securities said.

Among the major companies reporting higher quarterly earnings were American Telephone & Telegraph, which rose nearly a point; Upjohn, which jumped more than three points; and Motorola, up more than two points.

The market also was helped by the Labor Department's announcement at the start of the session that the rise in consumer prices during the first quarter was the smallest rise for any quarter in almost four years.

The consumer price index edged up two-tenths of a per cent in March and rose at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 2.9 per cent in January, February and March.

"That is good," Stovall said. "It is further evidence that inflation has slowed."

Stock traders tend to shift their money to other investments when inflation is high and many have been concerned in recent weeks that the economic recovery might move too fast and generate a new burst of inflation, he said.

The volume of trading rose for the third straight session, and 26.60 million shares changed hands on the Big Board, up from 23.50 million on Tuesday.

A block trade of 600,000 shares boosted Benguet Consolidated to the top of the actives list. It was down a fraction.

Polaroid, down a fraction, and Eastman Kodak, up a fraction, were also active, following their large price moves Tuesday when Kodak announced a competing instant camera. The market value index of the American Stock Exchange climbed .40 to 103.47.

Gas Company's Earnings Hurt By Mild Winter

Kansas City (AP) — The Gas Service Co., which distributes natural gas to parts of Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Nebraska, reported Wednesday a drop in earnings for the fiscal year ended March 31.

The Kansas City-based firm said net income for the year amounted to $6.2 million, down from $7.7 million a year earlier. Gross revenue increased from $199.2 million to $211.2 million during the same period. The company also said earnings per share were $1.40, down from earnings of $1.89 per share reported on fewer shares for the same period a year earlier.

The annual report said the lower earnings resulted from increased curtailment of sales to industrial customers and unusually warm weather in February and March. The company said the earnings loss came despite rate increases during the year in Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma.

Hog, Cattle Price Slide Reversed

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Wednesday's hog and cattle receipts on the Omaha livestock market were sharply curtailed from Tuesday, and the result was a reversal of Tuesday's price slide.

Wednesday's hog receipts were estimated at about 2,800 head, compared with Tuesday's 7,200 head. The trade on barrows and gilts was active, and the trend was $1.00-to-$1.50 higher.

Sows turned 50-cents to $1.00 higher on tickets marked generally from $43.50-$43.75.

The cattle run was estimated at about 3,700 head, and the trade on slaughter steers and heifers was uneven.

The early trade was mostly $1.00 higher, with some steers moving as much as $1.25-to-$1.50 to the upside. However, many buyers got their needed numbers, and later trade slowed, with limited late sales termed 50-to-75 cents higher.

Cows saw moderate activity, with the trend called 25-to-50 cents higher in come instances on canners and cutters.

Sheep receipts were estimated at about 600 head, and there was another record lamb top.

Slaughter lambs trended $1.75 higher than last test of trade, which was last Wednesday.

Campus Mass Ban Is Upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court has upheld a Delaware state court decision blocking the University of Delaware's efforts to prevent Roman Catholic chaplains from saying Mass on campus.

The upheld court decision maintained that prohibiting religious services on campuses violated freedom of religion of students unless a "compelling state interest" could be shown for such a restriction.

N. Platte Council Orders Gas Hike Refunded

North Platte (AP) — The North Platte City Council voted Tuesday night to instruct Northwestern Gas Co. to refund any money collected on billings for the month of March under a proposed rate increase.

The average residential customer hike initiated by the company is about 20%.

The Federal Power Commission gave Kansas-Nebraska Gas Co., supplier of Northwestern, permission to raise wholesale gas rates on March 14, subject to final approval.

Northwestern told the council it would implement the rate increase on April 1.

However, customers complained to the City Council that bills for the month of March reflected the increases.

The council voted to order the refund, and in another ballot disapproved the proposed rate increase.

Northwestern did not say if it would comply with the council order.

Clarence Becker, Northwestern manager, said nearly half of the company's customers were billed for the increases in statements that went out April 2. out April 2.

He added that the billing would be for the 30 days prior to April 2. The council then instructed Northwestern to refund money collected under the increase for that billing period.

Richard Satterfield, attorney for the council, said the council has authority, to set rates for the community, and also to order the refunds.

However, Becker said City Council permission was not required to implement the increase, and that the council was premature in its action because the money was collected under bond pending a final decision by the FPC.

Dow Close Is Highest In 3 Years

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock traders brushed aside the pressure of profit taking Wednesday and pushed the Dow Jones industrial average to its highest close in more than three years.

The widely followed average of 30 major industrial company stocks rose 7.56 to 1,011.02—its highest close since it finished at 1,018.66 on Jan. 23, 1973.

The Dow wavered as low as 1,006 during the session as some investors cashed in on the profits they accumulated in its rise of more than 28 points in the previous three trading days.

In the last hour of trading, the Dow rose almost five points.

Advancing New York Stock Exchange issues led those declining by an 8-5 margin, and the exchange's composite index of all its listed common stocks climbed .24 to 55 even.

A major influence on the market was the continuing flow of reports of higher corporate profits in the first three months of the year.

"The earnings have been consistently outstanding and dividend increases quite common," analyst Robert Stovall of Reynolds Securities said.

Among the major companies reporting higher quarterly earnings were American Telephone & Telegraph, which rose nearly a point; Upjohn, which jumped more than three points; and Motorola, up more than two points.

The market also was helped by the Labor Department's announcement at the start of the session that the rise in consumer prices during the first quarter was the smallest rise for any quarter in almost four years.

The consumer price index edged up two-tenths of a per cent in March and rose at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 2.9 per cent in January, February and March.

"That is good," Stovall said. "It is further evidence that inflation has slowed."

Stock traders tend to shift their money to other investments when inflation is high and many have been concerned in recent weeks that the economic recovery might move too fast and generate a new burst of inflation, he said.

The volume of trading rose for the third straight session, and 26.60 million shares changed hands on the Big Board, up from 23.50 million on Tuesday.

A block trade of 600,000 shares boosted Benguet Consolidated to the top of the actives list. It was down a fraction.

Polaroid, down a fraction, and Eastman Kodak, up a fraction, were also active, following their large price moves Tuesday when Kodak announced a competing instant camera. The market value index of the American Stock Exchange climbed .40 to 103.47.

Gas Company's Earnings Hurt By Mild Winter

Kansas City (AP) — The Gas Service Co., which distributes natural gas to parts of Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Nebraska, reported Wednesday a drop in earnings for the fiscal year ended March 31.

The Kansas City-based firm said net income for the year amounted to $6.2 million, down from $7.7 million a year earlier. Gross revenue increased from $199.2 million to $211.2 million during the same period. The company also said earnings per share were $1.40, down from earnings of $1.89 per share reported on fewer shares for the same period a year earlier.

The annual report said the lower earnings resulted from increased curtailment of sales to industrial customers and unusually warm weather in February and March. The company said the earnings loss came despite rate increases during the year in Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma.

Hog, Cattle Price Slide Reversed

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Wednesday's hog and cattle receipts on the Omaha livestock market were sharply curtailed from Tuesday, and the result was a reversal of Tuesday's price slide.

Wednesday's hog receipts were estimated at about 2,800 head, compared with Tuesday's 7,200 head. The trade on barrows and gilts was active, and the trend was $1.00-to-$1.50 higher.

The cattle run was estimated at about 3,700 head, and the trade on slaughter steers and heifers was uneven.

The early trade was mostly $1.00 higher, with some steers moving as much as $1.25-to-$1.50 to the upside. However, many buyers got their needed numbers, and later trade slowed, with limited late sales termed 50-to-75 cents higher.

Cows saw moderate activity, with the trend called 25-to-50 cents higher in come instances on canners and cutters.

Sheep receipts were estimated at about 600 head, and there was another record lamb top.

It was Income Tax Day and there wasn't a bone in the cupboard.

Bullets Square Series

LANDOVER, Md. (UPI) — Clem Haskins came off the bench to spark a second quarter rally and wound up with 22 points Wednesday night in leading the Washington Bullets to a 109-98 victory over Cleveland and a 2-2 tie in their NBA Eastern Division semifinal playoff series.

The Bullets, playing their best basketball of the best-of-seven series, rallied from a second quarter deficit and broke the game open in the third period when Cleveland suffered a dry spell of more than four minutes.

Nick Weatherspoon, in his first starting role of the year, added 19 points for the Bullets while Phil Chenier had 14.

Haskins, a guard in his ninth year in the NBA and with his third club, hit 10 of 14 shots from the floor in scoring his first points of the series.

Campy Russell led Cleveland with 22 points, followed by Jim Chones with 21 and Jim Brewer had 13, 11 of them in the first half.

The 109 points were the most scored by the Bullets in the series, which moves back to the Richfield, Ohio, Coliseum Thursday for game No. 5.

After the first half ended in a 51-all tie, the Bullets, led by Weatherspoon, came out shooting in the third period.

3 Huskers To Get Honors

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Tony Davis, Bob Martin and Rik Bonness will be halftime stars at the annual Red vs White intrasquad spring football game May 1 at Nebraska's Memorial Stadium.

They'll be on the field to accept awards as a result of their performances during last season's 10-2 Cornhusker season.

Davis has been selected in a vote of sportswriters and broadcasters who cover Nebraska games as winner of the Tom Novak Trophy, presented annually by J. Gordon Roberts of Omaha.

The senior from Tecumseh ended his career as the Huskers' leading ball carrier of all time. He rushed 563 times for 2,447 yards in three seasons.

Martin, two-time All-Big Eight defensive end from David City, is the recipient of the eighth annual Guy Chamberlin Memorial Trophy.

Wins Novak Trophy

The award, first presented in 1967 in memory of the former Nebraska All-American who is enshrined in both the college and pro football halls of fame, is given to the senior player who has shown by his play and contributions to the betterment of the NU football squad that he has the qualities and dedication of Chamberlin to the Nebraska football tradition.

Bonness will accept his All-American plaque for being picked to the American Football Coaches Association's honor team as the nation's No. 1 center.

Wednesday's practice session in the stadium featured scrimmaging for 10 minutes by each the first and second units and 20 minutes by the third and fourth teams.

"There was good effort and good hitting," Coach Tom Osborne said "There was intensity that you sometimes don't get in a Wednesday scrimmage."

I-back Dale Zabrocki, a junior from Bellevue, sprained an ankle during the workout.

Needed A Change

Grand Island — It didn't take Randy Garroutte long to realize he couldn't work an 8-5 job.

"I took a job as an accountant in Lincoln, but I got tired of the 8-5 routine, so I kept looking around and finally I found something to keep busy," said the 24-year-old Grand Island resident who is seeking a race track management position.

Garroutte has kept busy at this spring's Fonner Park races, making 22 telephone calls each racing day to various newspapers, radio and television stations with results. He also has a race prediction show for a Hastings radio station and does the feature race for a Grand Island radio station.

Unlike many race track executives, however, Garroutte started near the top.

He served as assistant general manager and clerk of scales at last summer's inaugural 10-day quarterhorse meeting at Broken Bow. He may return to Broken Bow this summer or find a position with the Deshler quarterhorse races.

He worked in the mutuels, handled the promotions and public relations as well as the advertising and ticket sales at the Broken Bow meet — the first quarterhorse meet ever held in Nebraska.

"One thing which amazed me working around the tracks the last two years is the control the managers have. Al Swihart (Fonner GM) never gets upset," he said. "He doesn't get real nervous. When you start thinking of all the things that could go wrong.

"We talked about all the possibilities last summer and Sonny (Crockett, Broken Bow GM) said, 'look we had eight races, all the horses finished, so we must have done something right.'"

Racing Background

It shouldn't be that difficult for the 1974 business administration graduate of the University of Nebraska to find a position. He comes from a long line of horsemen.

His father, John Garroutte, was a jockey on the Nebraska circuit. His mother served as secretary for the Nebraska State Racing Commission for five years in the early 1960s. His grandfather, John, was a trainer in Detroit. An uncle, Jim Garroutte, a former jockey is now a trainer and another uncle, Leon Hall, is an outrider on the Nebraska circuit.

"It's hard to find something when you haven't been around for that long," he noted. "I've sent some resumes around and hopefully some doors will open. I may work in the mutuel department somewhere.

"I've had experience on the backside and the racing terminology doesn't throw me," said the 1970 Grand Island Senior High School graduate. "I'm sure I don't know enough to handle the whole thing (meet) by myself."

He cited Swihart and his top assistant, Hugh Miner Jr., for their assistance at Fonner.

"Swihart's the best general manager around. He's tough, but he's always available. He's always aware of what's happening whether it's in the jocks' room or the mutuels. He's been very fair to me."

Still, Garroutte admits his largest problem is one of identity.

"Right now, my biggest problem is that race tracks don't know I exist," he said.

Buehrer Misses No-Hitter Chance In NU-UNO Split

By KEN HAMBLETON
Star Sports Writer

Omaha — Despite two brilliant pitching performances, the Nebraska Huskers couldn't gain more than a split with UNO Wednesday, losing the opener 3-2 and winning the nightcap 6-3 at the UNO's College World Series Park.

In the opener, Dave Buehrer, a senior righthander, hurled six innings of no-hit pitching before giving up a walk to the first batter he faced, Mark Mancuso, in the bottom of the sixth and removing himself from the game with a 2-0 lead.

Boyd Batenhorst, who had won four straight games before taking a loss in relief Monday against Kearney State, came in and faced Rich Shefte with a 2 and 0 count and walked him.

The next batter flyed to center advancing the runners to second and third and then Bruce Benedict singled to center bringing in Mike Wurth, who was running for Mancuso. Al Wees followed with a single, scoring Shefte and then Jim Hercinger singled to load the bases. Batenhorst still hadn't found a comfortable spot on the mound and his next pitch sailed into the backstop allowing Benedict to score the winning run.

Buehrer, who had pitched his way out of a bases-loaded jam in the first inning, stranded 10 UNO runners and struck out eight, said he was disappointed with the loss. "I had thrown 118 pitches and was really getting tired," Buehrer said. "I just figured that Boyd was fresh and I could finally get a win, but the plan backfired."

"It's really a shame he couldn't stay in there with the no-hitter going," said NU coach Tony Sharpe. "But we want our kids to be honest and tell us if they're hurting."

Nebraska, now 14-20-1, took a 2-0 lead in the fifth inning when Doug Miller lined a two-run single to left field scoring Larry Winum and Paul Haas, who both singled.

In the nightcap, two-run homers by Haas and Steve McManaman and a strong relief pitching performance by Jerry Yingling gave the Huskers their eighth straight doubleheader spirt.

Haas, who homered Monday, staked NU to a 2-0 lead in the first inning with a smash over the left field fence scoring Dick Anderson, who singled. Anderson went three for four for the game.

Gary Healey lined a bases-loaded double in the second inning to give the Huskers a 4-2 lead.

McManaman, a 6-4, 210-pound left fielder, then boosted NU's lead with a 400-foot drive over the centerfield fence in the top of the third. UNO answered with a run in the bottom of the third but could not mount a threat after then as Yingling, now 3-0, allowed just one hit in the 4 2/3 innings of relief, while striking out six and walking four.

"Yingling showed a lot of guts out there and really threw hard," said Sharpe. "He's been struggling lately and really has had a lot of trouble getting his fastball working.

"This splitting doubleheaders has become old hat but I'm pleased with certain developments in our lineup," Sharpe said. "Anderson, Healey, Glusmann and Haas are starting to carry a bigger load at the plate and that's what we're going to need to win some games. With hits from McManaman and Winum we're starting to become the hitting team we can be."

The Huskers will return to the NU Diamond Friday for a single game with Kansas at 3 p.m. and then host the Jayhawks in a doubleheader at 1 p.m., instead of the 2 p.m. regular time. UNO will travel to Lincoln for another twinbill with the Huskers on Spring Sports Day, May 1.

Cowens' 30 Paces Boston

BOSTON (AP) — Dave Cowens, playing with a painful heel bone spur, scored 30 points and Jo Jo White contributed 27 as the Boston Celtics whipped the Buffalo Braves 107-98 Wednesday night in the opener of the National Basketball Association Eastern semifinal playoffs.

Capt. John Havlicek also gave the Celtics a big helping hand with 22 points as Boston opened its bid for a 13th NBA title in the best-of-seven series.

Cowens, playing all but the final seconds, grabbed 17 rebounds, had seven assists and five steals in another brilliant effort.

White had eight assists and three steals to go with his scoring.

The Celtics jumped to a 6-0 lead, but Buffalo came back to go in front by as much as eight points, 20-12. Boston rallied to close within two at 31-29 after one period.

The Celtics finally went in front midway through the second period on consecutive baskets by Cowens, White, Havlicek and Cowens again. Boston went on to hold a 55-51 lead at the half.

Smith finished with 27 points and McMillian added 24. Bob McAdoo, the NBA scoring champion who averaged better than 30 points a game against Boston this season, managed just 16.

Spurs Get Even With New York

From News Wires

Larry Kenon sank two free throws with just three seconds left Wednesday night as the San Antonio Spurs outlasted a fourth-quarter New York onslaught for a 106-105 victory in their American Basketball Association best-of-seven playoff series.

The victory meant the final game Sunday at New York will determine who plays the winner of the Denver-Kentucky playoff series. The Spurs-New York series is now tied at three victories apiece.

Kenon's winning free throws were set up by a foul committed by the Nets' Julius Erving, who scored 31 of his 41 points in the second half and ignited New York's final three-minute rally in the fourth period.

For San Antonio, it was George Gervin's steady shooting for 37 points and center Billy Paultz' 17 second-half points which made the difference.

After an early see-saw battle, San Antonio esablished its dominance for most of the game on Gervin's 15-foot jump shot with 6:27 left in the second period.

With just 1:46 left in the game, Erving popped a basket in and drew a foul, but missed both free throws and San Antonio retained its lead 102-101.

But Erving came back with a 12-foot jumper to give New York a 103-102 edge. They were the last points for the Nets' superstar.

Kenon then hit a 14-footer and the Nets' John Williamson retaliated with a 16-foot basket to put the Nets in front again, 105-104.

New York played without forward Rich Jones, a former San Antonio Spur who went to New York last year in a trade for Billy Paultz.

Jones had been subject to stinging criticism from San Antonio Coach Bob Bass and General Manager John Begnos, and the local news media.

Jones, Williamson, Brian Taylor and San Antonio guard George Karl drew $300 fines for fighting in last Sunday's fourth game of the series.

Denver 108, Kentucky 106

Chuck Williams' 24-foot jumper at the buzzer lifted Denver to a pulsating 108-106 victory over Kentucky to square the teams' playoff at two games apiece.

Williams' basket came on an out-of-bounds play that began with four seconds left after Jan van Breda Kolff had tied the game 106-106 with a layup. Kentucky's defense followed Ralph Simpson and David Thompson underneath and left Williams open just inside the three-point circle.

The winning basket capped a Denver rally from several sizeable first half deficits. With Simpson scoring 15 of his game-high 26 points after intermission, the Nuggets matched the Colonels almost basket for basket in the final two periods.

Kentucky's last significant lead came with 5:22 left to play when Johnny Neumann hit the last of three consecutive shots for a 94-91 advantage.

Williams, who finished with 20 points, knotted the count 12 seconds later with a layup and a free throw.

Kentucky held four more leads and the game was tied five more times in the waning minutes before Williams' bomb ended it all.

Gilmore led Kentucky with 22 points and Averitt added 21. Lucas added 18 points and 19 rebounds.

Porter Better After Injury

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Nebraska football player Budge Porter was apparently slowly improving late last night after suffering a serious injury during Wednesday afternoon's Husker football practice.

"He was making a tackle and was popped by two opposing forces. He was conscious, but didn't seem to be able to move," said Budge's father, Mort Porter, from a Lincoln hospital.

"The Nebraska trainers (head trainer Paul Schneider and physical therapist George Sullivan) very carefully attended to Budge and put him on a stretcher and sent him by ambulance here.

"They put him in traction and now he's got feeling back in his toes, legs, arms and seems to be coming back," said Porter.

Porter explained Budge didn't break his neck but put it out of line. "A vertebra was out of line so it involved his spinal chord," he said.

"Having his feeling back is a good sign, but in the meantime, it's a waiting game," Porter said.

"We sensed it was serious. He had a great deal of trouble moving," Osborne said from the hospital late Wednesday night. "We felt it was serious and the trainers handled it pretty well.

"It's the first serious injury in quite a few years," Osborne continued. "Every injury is serious, but it's a lot different than, say, a knee injury. The doctors say chances for a complete recovery are very, very good, but until that point is reached, you just hope for the best."

Hospital officials listed Budge as "serious."

NWU Homers Drop Dana Twice

Blair — Nebraska Wesleyan won its 31st consecutive Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference baseball game Wednesday in a 5-4 come-from-behind victory over Dana College. The Plainsman triumph, coupled with a 2-1 NWU win in the opener of the doubleheader, upped Wesleyan's NIAC season record to 12-0.

Home runs accounted for the winning runs in both contests. In the opener, designated hitter John Svehla broke a scoreless game in the fifth inning when he blasted a 2-2 fastball over the 286 marker in right field after Jim Hamersky had lined a two-out single past shortstop.

Bob Blake struck the deciding blow in the nightcap when he smashed a curveball 370 feet over the leftfield fence in the sixth inning for NWU's fifth run.

Wesleyan righthander Jack Ball limited the Vikings to five hits without allowing a walk in the second game as he recorded his sixth straight triumph. Ball was touched for all four Dana runs in the second inning, two on a Bob Andrews home run and another pair due to poor fielding.

NWU had opened the scoring in the nightcap when Bruce Reed doubled and Bob Blake singled him home.

After Dana moved ahead 4-1 in the second, the Plainsmen came right back with a two-run home run by Byron Stallworth that scored Mike Reta in front of him.

Doug Votava scored an unearned run in the third inning to tie the contest at 4-4 and set up Blake's winning blast.

Plainsman southpaw Larry Abel dominated the first game by fanning a personal high of nine batters and allowing only two hits. One of the hits, a triple, led to the Viking's only run. Abel's win was the Central City graduate's fifth in his last six outings.

Abel's batting support was provided by fellow hurler Svehla, a freshman from York, who was being used as a designated hitter for the first time this spring.

Wesleyan's victories increased its record to 16-10 and dropped Dana to 10-13. NWU has won 15 of its last 17 games.

NWU will be host to Concordia in a Saturday doubleheader starting at 1 p.m. at Sherman Field.

Bullets Square Series

LANDOVER, Md. (UPI) — Clem Haskins came off the bench to spark a second quarter rally and wound up with 22 points Wednesday night in leading the Washington Bullets to a 109-98 victory over Cleveland and a 2-2 tie in their NBA Eastern Division semifinal playoff series.

The Bullets, playing their best basketball of the best-of-seven series, rallied from a second quarter deficit and broke the game open in the third period when Cleveland suffered a dry spell of more than four minutes.

Nick Weatherspoon, in his first starting role of the year, added 19 points for the Bullets while Phil Chenier had 14.

Haskins, a guard in his ninth year in the NBA and with his third club, hit 10 of 14 shots from the floor in scoring his first points of the series.

Campy Russell led Cleveland with 22 points, followed by Jim Chones with 21 and Jim Brewer had 13, 11 of them in the first half.

The 109 points were the most scored by the Bullets in the series, which moves back to the Richfield, Ohio, Coliseum Thursday for game No. 5.

After the first half ended in a 51-all tie, the Bullets, led by Weatherspoon, came out shooting in the third period.

Tony Davis, Bob Martin and Rik Bonness will be halftime stars at the annual Red vs. White intrasquad spring football game May 1 at Nebraska's Memorial Stadium.

They'll be on the field to accept awards as a result of their performances during last season's 10-2 Cornhusker season.

Davis has been selected in a vote of sportswriters and broadcasters who cover Nebraska games as winner of the Tom Novak Trophy, presented annually by J. Gordon Roberts of Omaha.

The senior from Tecumseh ended his career as the Huskers' leading ball carrier of all time. He rushed 563 times for 2,447 yards in three seasons.

The trophy, established by Roberts in 1950, is presented to the Husker senior who "best exemplifies courage and determination despite all odds in the manner of Nebraska All-American center Tom Novak."

Martin, two-time All-Big Eight defensive end from David City, is the recipient of the eighth annual Guy Chamberlin Memorial Trophy.

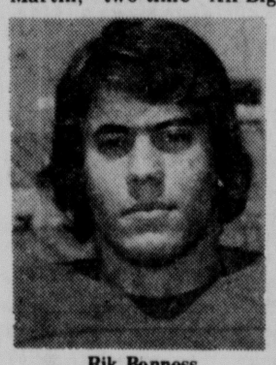
Bob Martin
Chamberlin Award



Rik Bonness
Country's Top Center

The award, first presented in 1967 in memory of the former Nebraska All-American who is enshrined in both the college and pro football halls of fame, is given to the senior player who has shown by his play and contributions to the betterment of the NU football squad that he has the qualities and dedication of Chamberlin to the Nebraska football tradition.

Bonness will accept his All-American plaque for being picked to the American Football Coaches Association's honor team as the nation's No. 1 center.

Wednesday's practice session in the stadium featured scrimmaging for 10 minutes by each the first and second units and 20 minutes by the third and fourth teams.

"There was good effort and good hitting," Coach Tom Osborne said. "There was intensity that you sometimes don't get in a Wednesday scrimmage."

I-back Dale Zabrocki, a junior from Bellevue, sprained an ankle during the workout.

The new depth chart, revised by the coaching staff after grading movies of last Saturday's scrimmage, showed two players sharing spots with the Blackshirt defensive unit and five positions on offense with two players each ranked No. 1.

Jeff Pullen and Dan Brock were tops at middle guard while George Andrews has moved up to share right defensive end with Tony Samuel.

The offensive spots where a battle is on include quarterback, with Vince Ferragamo and Tom Sorley; split end, with Dave Shamblin and Tim Smith; I-back, with Monte Anthony and Dave Gillespie; fullback, with Dodie Donnell and Gary Higgs; and wingback, with Curtis Craig and Darrell Walton.

Cowens' 30 Paces Boston

BOSTON (AP) — Dave Cowens, playing with a painful heel bone spur, scored 30 points and Jo Jo White contributed 27 as the Boston Celtics whipped the Buffalo Braves 107-98 Wednesday night in the opener of the National Basketball Association Eastern semifinal playoffs.

Capt. John Havlicek also gave the Celtics a big helping hand with 22 points as Boston opened its bid for a 13th NBA title in the best-of-seven series.

Cowens, playing all but the final seconds, grabbed 17 rebounds, had seven assists and five steals in another brilliant effort.

White had eight assists and three steals to go with his scoring.

The Celtics jumped to a 6-0 lead, but Buffalo came back to go in front by as much as eight points, 20-12. Boston rallied to close within two at 31-29 after one period.

The Celtics finally went in front midway through the second period on consecutive baskets by Cowens, White, Havlicek and Cowens again. Boston went on to hold a 55-51 lead at the half.

Smith finished with 27 points and McMillian added 24. Bob McAdoo, the NBA scoring champion who averaged better than 30 points a game against Boston this season, managed just 16.

Spurs Get Even With New York

From News Wires

Larry Kenon sank two free throws with just three seconds left Wednesday night as the San Antonio Spurs outlasted a fourth-quarter New York onslaught for a 106-105 victory in their American Basketball Association best-of-seven playoff series.

The victory meant the final game Sunday at New York will determine who plays the winner of the Denver-Kentucky playoff series. The Spurs-New York series is now tied at three victories apiece.

Kenon's winning free throws were set up by a foul committed by the Nets' Julius Erving, who scored 31 of his 41 points in the second half and ignited New York's final three-minute rally in the fourth period.

For San Antonio, it was George Gervin's steady shooting for 37 points and center Billy Paultz' 17 second-half points which made the difference.

After an early see-saw battle, San Antonio esablished its dominance for most of the game on Gervin's 15-foot jump shot with 6:27 left in the second period.

With just 1:46 left in the game, Erving popped a basket in and drew a foul, but missed both free throws and San Antonio retained its lead 102-101.

But Erving came back with a 12-foot jumper to give New York a 103-102 edge. They were the last points for the Nets' superstar.

Kenon then hit a 14-footer and the Nets' John Williamson retaliated with a 16-foot basket to put the Nets in front again, 105-104.

New York played without forward Rich Jones, a former San Antonio Spur who went to New York last year in a trade for Billy Paultz.

Jones had been subject to stinging criticism from San Antonio Coach Bob Bass and General Manager John Begzos, and the local news media.

Jones, Williamson, Brian Taylor and San Antonio guard George Karl drew $300 fines for fighting in last Sunday's fourth game of the series.

Denver 108, Kentucky 106

Chuck Williams' 24-foot jumper at the buzzer lifted Denver to a pulsating 108-106 victory over Kentucky to square the teams' playoff at two games apiece.

Williams' basket came on an out-of-bounds play that began with four seconds left after Jan van Breda Kolff had tied the game 106-106 with a layup. Kentucky's defense followed Ralph Simpson and David Thompson underneath and left Williams open just inside the three-point circle.

The ball had just left Williams' hand as the buzzer sounded.

The winning basket capped a Denver rally from several sizeable first half deficits. With Simpson scoring 15 of his game-high 26 points after intermission, the Nuggets matched the Colonels almost basket for basket in the final two periods.

Kentucky's last significant lead came with 5:22 left to play when Johnny Neumann hit the last of three consecutive shots for a 94-91 advantage.

Williams, who finished with 20 points, knotted the count 12 seconds later with a layup and a free throw.

Kentucky held four more leads and the game was tied five more times in the waning minutes before Williams' bomb ended it all.

Gilmore led Kentucky with 22 points and Averitt added 21. Lucas added 18 points and 19 rebounds.

Porter Better After Injury

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Nebraska football player Budge Porter was apparently slowly improving late last night after suffering a serious injury during Wednesday afternoon's Husker football practice.

"He was making a tackle and was popped by two opposing forces. He was conscious, but didn't seem to be able to move," said Budge's father, Mort Porter, from a Lincoln hospital.

"The Nebraska trainers (head trainer Paul Schneider and physical therapist George Sullivan) very carefully attended to Budge and put him on a stretcher and sent him by ambulance here.

"They put him in traction and now he's got feeling back in his toes, legs, arms and seems to be coming back," said Porter.

Porter explained Budge didn't break his neck but put it out of line. "A vertebra was out of line so it involved his spinal chord," he said.

"Having his feeling back is a good sign, but in the meantime, it's a waiting game," Porter said.

"We sensed it was serious. He had a great deal of trouble moving," Osborne said from the hospital late Wednesday night. "We felt it was serious and the trainers handled it pretty well.

"It's the first serious injury in quite a few years," Osborne continued. "Every injury is serious, but it's a lot different than, say, a knee injury. The doctors say chances for a complete recovery are very, very good, but until that point is reached, you just hope for the best."

Hospital officials listed Budge as "serious."

The younger Porter last May had knee surgery that was termed "completely successful" by his father. Redshirted in 1975, he is a 6-1, 184-pound sophomore defensive back.

NWU Homers Drop Dana Twice

Blair — Nebraska Wesleyan won its 31st consecutive Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference baseball game Wednesday in a 5-4 come-from-behind victory over Dana College. The Plainsman triumph, coupled with a 2-1 NWU win in the opener of the doubleheader, upped Wesleyan's NIAC season record to 12-0.

Home runs accounted for the winning runs in both contests. In the opener, designated hitter John Svehla broke a scoreless game in the fifth inning when he blasted a 2-2 fastball over the 286 marker in right field after Jim Hamersky had lined a two-out single past shortstop.

Bob Blake struck the deciding blow in the nightcap when he smashed a curveball 370 feet over the leftfield fence in the sixth inning for NWU's fifth run.

Wesleyan righthander Jack Ball limited the Vikings to five hits without allowing a walk in the second game as he recorded his sixth straight triumph. Ball was touched for all four Dana runs in the second inning, two on a Bob Andrews home run and another pair due to poor fielding.

NWU had opened the scoring in the nightcap when Bruce Reed doubled and Bob Blake singled him home.

After Dana moved ahead 4-1 in the second, the Plainsmen came right back with a two-run home run by Byron Stallworth that scored Mike Reta in front of him.

Doug Votava scored an unearned run in the third inning to tie the contest at 4-4 and set up Blake's winning blast.

Plainsman southpaw Larry Abel dominated the first game by fanning a personal high of nine batters and allowing only two hits. One of the hits, a triple, led to the Viking's only run. Abel's win was the Central City graduate's fifth in his last six outings.

Abel's batting support was provided by fellow hurler Svehla, a freshman from York, who was being used as a designated hitter for the first time this spring.

Wesleyan's victories increased its record to 16-10 and dropped Dana to 10-13. NWU has won 15 of its last 17 games.

NWU will be host to Concordia in a Saturday doubleheader starting at 1 p.m. at Sherman Field.

THE PADDOCK

By Mark Gordon

Needed A Change

Grand Island — It didn't take Randy Garroutte long to realize he couldn't work an 8-5 job.

"I took a job as an accountant in Lincoln, but I got tired of the 8-5 routine, so I kept looking around and finally I found something to keep busy," said the 24-year-old Grand Island resident who is seeking a race track management position.

Garroutte has kept busy at this spring's Fonner Park races, making 22 telephone calls each racing day to various newspapers, radio and television stations with results. He also has a race prediction show for a Hastings radio station and does the feature race for a Grand Island radio station.

Unlike many race track executives, however, Garroutte started near the top.

He served as assistant general manager and clerk of scales at last summer's inaugural 10-day quarterhorse meeting at Broken Bow. He may return to Broken Bow this summer or find a position with the Deshler quarterhorse races.

He worked in the mutuels, handled the promotions and public relations as well as the advertising and ticket sales at the Broken Bow meet — the first quarterhorse meet ever held in Nebraska.

"One thing which amazed me working around the tracks the last two years is the control the managers have. Al Swihart (Fonner GM) never gets upset," he said. "He doesn't get real nervous. When you start thinking of all the things that could go wrong.

"We talked about all the possibilities last summer and Sonny (Crockett, Broken Bow GM) said, 'look we had eight races, all the horses finished, so we must have done something right.' "

Racing Background

It shouldn't be that difficult for the 1974 business administration graduate of the University of Nebraska to find a position. He comes from a long line of horsemen.

His father, John Garroutte, was a jockey on the Nebraska circuit. His mother served as secretary for the Nebraska State Racing Commission for five years in the early 1960s. His grandfather, John, was a trainer in Detroit. An uncle, Jim Garroutte, a former jockey is now a trainer and another uncle, Leon Hall, is an outrider on the Nebraska circuit.

"It's hard to find something when you haven't been around for that long," he noted. "I've sent some resumes around and hopefully some doors will open. I may work in the mutuel department somewhere.

"I've had experience on the backside and the racing terminology doesn't throw me," said the 1970 Grand Island Senior High School graduate. "I'm sure I don't know enough to handle the whole thing (meet) by myself."

He cited Swihart and his top assistant, Hugh Miner Jr., for their assistance at Fonner.

"Swihart's the best general manager around. He's tough, but he's always available. He's always aware of what's happening whether it's in the jocks' room or the mutuels. He's been very fair to me."

Still, Garroutte admits his largest problem is one of identity.

"Right now, my biggest problem is that race tracks don't know I exist," he said.

Buehrer Misses No-Hitter Chance In NU-UNO Split

By KEN HAMBLETON
Star Sports Writer

Omaha — Despite two brilliant pitching performances, the Nebraska Huskers couldn't gain more than a split with UNO Wednesday, losing the opener 3-2 and winning the nightcap 6-3 at the UNO's College World Series Park.

In the opener, Dave Buehrer, a senior righthander, hurled six innings of no-hit pitching before giving up a walk to the first batter he faced, Mark Mancuso, in the bottom of the sixth and removing himself from the game with a 2-0 lead.

Boyd Batenhorst, who had won four straight games before taking a loss in relief Monday against Kearney State, came in and faced Rich Shefte with a 2 and 0 count and walked him.

The next batter flyed to center advancing the runners to second and third and then Bruce Benedict singled to center bringing in Mike Wurth, who was running for Mancuso. Al Wees followed with a single, scoring Shefte and then Jim Hercinger singled to load the bases. Batenhorst still hadn't found a comfortable spot on the mound and his next pitch sailed into the backstop allowing Benedict to score the winning run.

Buehrer, who had pitched his way out of a bases-loaded jam in the first inning, stranded 10 UNO runners and struck out eight, said he was disappointed with the loss. "I had thrown 118 pitches and was really getting tired," Buehrer said. "I just figured that Boyd was fresh and I could finally get a win, but the plan backfired."

"It's really a shame he couldn't stay in there with the no-hitter going," said NU coach Tony Sharpe. "But we want our kids to be honest and tell us if they're hurting."

Nebraska, now 14-20-1, took a 2-0 lead in the fifth inning when Doug Miller lined a two-run single to left field scoring Larry Winum and Paul Haas, who both singled.

In the nightcap, two-run homers by Haas and Steve McManaman and a strong relief pitching performance by Jerry Yingling gave the Huskers their eighth straight doubleheader split.

Haas, who homered Monday, staked NU to a 2-0 lead in the first inning with a smash over the left field fence scoring Dick Anderson, who singled. Anderson went three for four for the game.

The Mavericks, now 19-8, tied the game in the bottom of the first when Hercinger doubled in Gary Haney and Benedict, who both walked.

Gary Healey lined a bases-loaded double in the second inning to give the Huskers a 4-2 lead.

McManaman, a 6-4, 210-pound left fielder, then boosted NU's lead with a 400-foot drive over the centerfield fence in the top of the third. UNO answered with a run in the bottom of the third but could not mount a threat after then as Yingling, now 3-0, allowed just one hit in the 4 2/3 innings of relief, while striking out six and walking four.

"Yingling showed a lot of guts out there and really threw hard," said Sharpe. "He's been struggling lately and really has had a lot of trouble getting his fastball working.

"This splitting doubleheaders has become old hat but I'm pleased with certain developments in our lineup," Sharpe said. "Anderson, Healey, Glismann and Haas are starting to carry a bigger load at the plate and that's what we're going to need to win some games. With hits from McManaman and Winum we're starting to become the hitting team we can be."

The Huskers will return to the NU Diamond Friday for a single game with Kansas at 3 p.m. and then host the Jayhawks in a doubleheader at 1 p.m., instead of the 2 p.m. regular time. UNO will travel to Lincoln for another twinbill with the Huskers on Spring Sports Day, May 1.

Baseball Fever High— Creating Strange Acts

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Thank goodness, Commissioner Bowie Kuhn stepped into baseball's labor crisis and the season got underway on time. It would have been a shame to delay the start of all this silliness.

Baseball has been doing business for two weeks now and it's been better than ever for strange goings-on.

Already, we've had two beanb a l l wars—on consecutive nights—a protested game over, of all things, sweatshirts, another protested game over the height of a pitchers' mound, a superstar sitting in Arizona, waiting to be coaxed to Baltimore, a swarm of bees delaying a game, a Monday night network television game that dragged over 17 innings into Tuesday morning and all manner of other developments.

The beanball battles involved first Baltimore and California and, one night later, the New York Mets and St. Louis.

The Mets-Cards war started after two-run home runs by Felix Millan, Del Unser and John Milner left St. Louis pitcher Lynn McGlothen somewhat unhappy. He responded by hitting Unser and Jon Matlack with pitches. It was no accident, admitted the Cardinal pitcher.

"I threw the baseball to hit Unser," McGlothen said. "I thought the situation called for it. I felt like I was being intimidated. I felt I had the right to let the hitter know I have the ball and there are certain things I can do with it."

McGlothen may still have been mad from the last act. The night before, Unser had hit a 17th inning home run, ending a marathon ball game. The people most delighted with that development had to be broadcasters Bob Prince, Bob Uecker and Warner Wolf who had the task of covering the game for ABC's Monday Night Baseball. Before they finished, that was was Tuesday Morning Baseball.

The bees were the central characters in Cincinnati last Saturday and delayed the game between the Reds and San Francisco Giants for 35 minutes until they could be persuaded, under duress, to depart Riverfront Stadium.

When they hired pepperpot Manager Billy Martin, the New York Yankees knew this season wouldn't be dull. And it hasn't been.

Martin protested his team's first game loss in Milwaukee, claiming the mound wasn't constructed properly. In the second game, he saved a Yankee victory when he directed New York first baseman Chris Chambliss to call time out an instant before Don Money hit what would have been a game-winning grand slam homer for the Brewers. After Money circled the bases, the umpired ordered him back to bat after a not-so-gentle reminder from Martin that he had called time.

In Milwaukee, the Yankees had used two nonroster catchers, Juan Espino and Rick Stelmaszek, as extra hands in their bullpen. But when they got to Baltimore, Martin's old friend, Oriole Manager Earl Weaver, said nothing doing.

Weaver refused permission for the two minor leaguers to dress and sit in the Yankee bullpen. Martin, however, had the last laugh when he got complete games from Catfish Hunter and Dock Ellis and never needed a bullpen catcher because he never had to warm up a pitcher.

Habitat Protest 'Apolitical'

By United Press International

Backers of a move to repeal a $4 million statewide wildlife habitat program said Wednesday there is no political motive involved even though one of the backers is running against an incumbent state senator who voted for the legislation.

"I was aware he was trying to make a campaign issue out of this," said the sponsor of the legislation adopted this year, Sen. Donald Dworak of Columbus. He was referring to Guy Cooper of Humboldt, one of two opposing Sen. Irving Wiltse of Falls City.

Kenneth Coonce of Falls City, a member of a group of 85 persons spearheading the drive to place a repealer proposal on the November general election ballot, was asked if he would classify the move as political.

"I would not," Coonce said. "This came up as soon as I found out it was going to cost me $21 to go hunting and fishing instead of $9."

The legislation calls for increases in fishing and hunting license fees.

Jolly Jogathon Saturday

The second annual General Allgood Jolly Jogathon, a "fun day" track meet open to everyone except members of a school track team, is set for Saturday on the Ed Weir track at the University of Nebraska.

In addition to an open and women's division, the meet will feature age-groups, dividing the competitors into 10-year groupings from the minimum entry age of 18 to the over-50 division.

Two field events — high jump and shot put — plus seven running events will be competed in each division. The running events are the 50 and 100-yard dashes, plus the 220, 440, 880, mile and five-mile runs.

The meet is co-sponsored by the Lincoln Central YMCA, the Lincoln Track Club and the University.

The meet will start at 9 a.m. with the field events, with the running events to follow. Though a participation fee will be charged — each competitor will receive a sourvenir tee shirt — the meet is open free to spectators.

Marks Set At Alma

Alma — Alma not only coasted to the 25-school Alma Invitational track championship here Tuesday, it also posted the state's fastest Class C 880 relay time.

Sophomore Dave McCue, junior Jay Anderson and seniors Steve Dunn and Alun Buttermore combined for a 1:32.6 clocking in the event.

The time ranks third in the state overall behind Class A's Omaha South and Grand Island.

Other meet highlights were a :50.9 quarter by Buttermore, tying a meet record, and a record 4:33.1 mile by Roseland's Kevin Jensen.

Jensen's time is the best in the state for Class D this spring.

School Shooting

School shooting programs are on the upswing, as evidenced by the turnouts at the Cornhusker Invitational Trapshoot, the state meet for high schools and collegiates, held two weeks ago at Doniphan.

Over 270 high school students took part, but the increase is only beginning, according to some of the inside sources.

Nebraska Game and Parks Commission members Ron Hoffman of North Platte and Dick Turpin of Lincoln are actively involved in hunter safety and school shooting programs. They see an increase coming, especially if some hurdles can be crossed.

While the turnout at the state shoot this year more than doubled that of last year, the participation of some schools is still dragging behind.

As one observer noted, "The programs in the individual schools are as successful as the governing attitudes permit." In other words, if a school has interested shooters in positions such as superintendents, principals, or instructors, the shooting program will likely thrive. If there aren't educators interested in sport shooting programs for youngsters, the schools won't likely support a team or teams.

Metropolitan areas are dragging behind the smaller towns, according to the entry list. Norris of Hickman had 12 shooters at the state shoot. Lincoln High had a team, East (a rarity in metropolitan participation) sported three teams, Southeast had a team and Pius X sponsored five shooters. Lincoln Northeast had one entry, Janet Bates, who came on her own and won the girls' competition.

Omaha's schools failed to enter a full team, although several individual shooters attended.

One school of intermediate size had a team or two in attendance but it was done all on the shooters and their coach's initiative.

The kids are enthused about the program. It's plastered all over their faces at shoots like the state shoot. Maybe school officials should take a better look at becoming involved.

By the way, Lincoln's schools will be holding a shoot of their own in the near future.

Reta Denounces 'Blatant Lies'

By United Press International

Nebraska swimming coach John Reta Wednesday said the controversy over the university swimming program has involved "outright blatant lies."

In a broadcast interview, Reta said, "We've belabored the point. I made the statement the other day that I want to get on with the job. I don't want to continue to drag a dead horse.

"There's been some outright blatant lies told," Reta said, "and I don't want to go on. I want to get on with the recruiting and get on with the program. I don't want to be pursuing a sour-grapes type of thing and continue it on and on."

Reta said he is optimistic about the future of the swimming program, despite team complaints about his coaching techniques. He said he talked individually Tuesday with swimmers who will be returning next year. "I'm optimistic we can advance the program," he said.

He said group goals "in the pursuit of excellent" will be formulated. "Like anything else, self-government is not any good without self-discipline."

No Progress Made In Rubber Talks

CLEVELAND (AP) — The striking United Rubber Workers and the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co met for 90 minutes Wednesday then recessed until Thursday morning with no substantial progress reported in contract talks

John Zimmerman, director of labor relations for Firestone, said neither the company nor the union budged from earlier positions that led to the strike at midnight Tuesday by 60,000 URW workers

But Zimmerman said the only substantial progress at Wednesday's session was in the area of clarifying the the cost-of-living adjustment He said "a lot of major issues are still before us"

Zimmerman said he agreed with union president Peter Bommarito that both sides are still far apart

Zimmerman said Firestone "is in a position to certainly withstand a strike of six weeks duration," but that he was optimistic that a settlement would be reached much sooner

Firestone offered hourly pay raises totaling $1 15 over three years, 60 cents in the first year, and what it termed an uncapped cost-of-living adjustment plus pension, health and other fringe benefit boosts

Bommarito disputed the description of the cost-of-living factor as unlimited, saying it wouldn t provide any money until April 1978 and was restricted by the terms on which it would be triggered

And he called the general wage increase ' short on what we need for a cost-of-living catch-up for 1976 alone"

He said earlier that the URW's total economic demands would raise the current average total package of $9 05 an hour by 42 ¢ Current average hourly pay was $5 50 the URW said

The federal Wage and Price Council in Washington had no immediate comment on the size of the URW demand

Bommarito said negotiations were continuing with the rest of the Big Four — Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co in Cincinnati B F Goodrich Co in Columbus and Uniroyal Inc in New York

Immediate results of the strike that began at midnight were shutdowns at the Big Four s 47 plants but there was little effect outside the industry

350 Cross Picket Lines At Goodyear Plant

About 350 non-union employes manned the Goodyear plant, at 4021 N 56th, Wednesday but the nationwide United Rubber Workers strike stopped all production there

The employes — executives, supervisors and clerical workers — crossed picket lines without incident, according to Gordon Hein, acting personnel manager

The union began round-the-clock picketing at the main plant and a branch plant in the Air Park West industrial complex at 11 p m Tuesday The Lincoln plant is one of 47 involved in the strike

Paul Ess, Goodyear personnel manager and Gilbert Laws, Local 286 president, remained in Cincinnati, where negotiations began March 8 Don Wright, Local 286 vice president, said the two sides met Wednesday but made no progress

Observers have said the strike may last a long time

Wright said union members will get $35-a-week strike pay beginning May 12, one week after their last paychecks from Goodyear They must work at least two hours a week in picket lines or the union office to be eligible he said

The local s strike money should last three or four weeks, longer if special provisions are made Wright said

Strikers are eligible for non public assistance food stamps but probably not unemployment benefits according to a Lancaster County Public Welfare spokesman Non public assistance means they receive no other welfare payments

Fay Shalla said many striking Goodyear workers won t be eligible for food stamps this month because their savings exceed the $1 500 limit Welfare workers will check bank accounts and union payments before issuing the stamps

It s going to be a real mess, Shalla said

By May if the strike goes that long the strikers probably will begin getting food stamps he said

Hein said union workers began wearing strike t-shirts (printed with On strike Local 286) several days before the strike began Wright said several hundred t-shirts were sold — but by individuals not the union

Urbom Nixes Suit Against Stuart Broadcasting

Claiming sex discrimination, Susan Rae Baker, of Grand Island, sued the Stuart Co , Grand Island Broadcasting Co , Ltd , James and Helen Stuart, Stuart Co owners, and Richard Chapin, Stuart Co president

Urbom said none of the defendants met the civil rights act's definition of employer (someone hiring at least 15 people) Therefore, his court had no authority to consider the suit, he ruled

Baker s suit alleged that she was hired by KRGI, a Grand Island radio station, but later dismissed because of her sex

The Stuart Co provides management services to the Grand Island Broadcasting Co

Lincoln Students Win Scholarships

Lincolnites John R. Auers and Eric J. Johnson have been named National Merit $1,000 Scholarship winners.

They are among the 1,000 high school seniors nationwide in the second of three announcements of Merit Scholars being made this year by the National Merit Scholarship Corp.

The one-time, nonrenewable awards to the Lincoln winners are sponsored by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

Auers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Auers, of 422 N. 27, is a senior at Lincoln High School. A four-year Regents' Scholarship winner and named to the Nebraska Regents All-state team, he plans to study chemical engineering at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Sports editor of his high school yearbook, John received the Sertoma Club award as "Outstanding Male Scholar" at Lincoln High. He is also a member of the reserve wrestling team, Junior Achievement and Interact Club.

A Southeast High School senior, Eric Johnson is the son of Mrs. Maxine Johnson of 2645 S. 44. Named a Regents Scholar and member of the Nebraska Regents All-State team, Eric expects to enter UNL next fall.

Nominated for presidential scholar, Eric has received the Rensselaer Medal and Sertoma Club award for scholarship. He has also participated in the Telluride Association summer program at Cornell University.

Other Nebraska winners include:

—Vicki L. Bergmann, Auburn Senior High School, mathematics, award sponsored by Amoco Foundation, Inc.

—Jeff J. Fisher, Doniphan High School, physics, award sponsored by International Business Machines Corp.

—Lori A. Mohr, Grand Island Senior High School, mathematics, award sponsored by International Business Machines Corp.

—Peter B. Knapp, Kearney Senior High School, political science, award sponsored by Allied Mills, Inc.

—Brian S. Armstrong, Omaha Westside High School, engineering, award sponsored by the Western Electric Fund.

—James D. Dunning, Omaha Northwest High School, premedicine, award sponsored by Hormel Foundation.

—David L. Williams, Scottsbluff Senior High School, mathematics, award sponsored by Outboard Marine Corp.

John R. Auers

Eric J. Johnson

Each of the winners was chosen in open competition with finalists from his state. The number of winners in each state is proportional to that state's percentage of the national total of graduating high school seniors.

In all, more than 3,800 scholarships, valued at about $10 million, will be awarded in the 21st annual competition.

No Progress Made In Rubber Talks

CLEVELAND (AP) — The striking United Rubber Workers and the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. met for 90 minutes Wednesday then recessed until Thursday morning with no substantial progress reported in contract talks.

John Zimmerman, director of labor relations for Firestone, said neither the company nor the union budged from earlier positions that led to the strike at midnight Tuesday by 60,000 URW workers.

But Zimmerman said the only substantial progress at Wednesday's session was in the area of clarifying the the cost-of-living adjustment. He said "a lot of major issues are still before us."

Zimmerman said he agreed with union president Peter Bommarito that both sides are still far apart.

Zimmerman said Firestone "is in a position to certainly withstand a strike of six weeks duration," but that he was optimistic that a settlement would be reached much sooner.

Firestone offered hourly pay raises totaling $1.15 over three years, 60 cents in the first year, and what it termed an uncapped cost-of-living adjustment plus pension, health and other fringe benefit boosts.

Bommarito disputed the description of the cost-of-living factor as unlimited, saying it wouldn't provide any money until April 1978 and was restricted by the terms on which it would be triggered.

And he called the general wage increase "short on what we need for a cost-of-living catch-up for 1976 alone."

He said earlier that the URW's total economic demands would raise the current average total package of $9.05 an hour by 42%. Current average hourly pay was $5.50, the URW said.

The federal Wage and Price Council in Washington had no immediate comment on the size of the URW demand.

Bommarito said negotiations were continuing with the rest of the Big Four — Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. in Cincinnati, B.F. Goodrich Co. in Columbus and Uniroyal Inc. in New York.

Immediate results of the strike that began at midnight were shutdowns at the Big Four's 47 plants, but there was little effect outside the industry.

350 Cross Picket Lines At Goodyear Plant

About 350 non-union employes manned the Goodyear plant, at 4021 N. 56th, Wednesday, but the nationwide United Rubber Workers strike stopped all production there.

The employes — executives, supervisors and clerical workers — crossed picket lines without incident, according to Gordon Hein, acting personnel manager.

The union began round-the-clock picketing at the main plant and a branch plant in the Air Park West industrial complex at 11 p.m. Tuesday. The Lincoln plant is one of 47 involved in the strike.

Paul Ess, Goodyear personnel manager, and Gilbert Laws, Local 286 president, remained in Cincinnati, where negotiations began March 8. Don Wright, Local 286 vice president, said the two sides met Wednesday but made no progress.

Observers have said the strike may last a long time.

Wright said union members will get $35-a-week strike pay beginning May 12, one week after their last paychecks from Goodyear. They must work at least two hours a week in picket lines or the union office to be eligible, he said.

The local's strike money should last three or four weeks, longer if special provisions are made, Wright said.

Strikers are eligible for non-public assistance food stamps but probably not unemployment benefits, according to a Lancaster County Public Welfare spokesman. Non-public assistance means they receive no other welfare payments.

Fay Shalla said many striking Goodyear workers won't be eligible for food stamps this month because their savings exceed the $1,500 limit. Welfare workers will check bank accounts and union payments before issuing the stamps.

"It's going to be a real mess," Shalla said.

By May, if the strike goes that long, the strikers probably will begin getting food stamps, he said.

Hein said union workers began wearing strike t-shirts (printed with "On strike, Local 286") several days before the strike began. Wright said several hundred t-shirts were sold — but by individuals, not the union.

Urbom Nixes Suit Against Stuart Broadcasting

Claiming sex discrimination, Susan Rae Baker, of Grand Island, sued the Stuart Co.; Grand Island Broadcasting Co., Ltd.; James and Helen Stuart, Stuart Co. owners, and Richard Chapin, Stuart Co. president.

Urbom said none of the defendants met the civil rights act's definition of employer (someone hiring at least 15 people). Therefore, his court had no authority to consider the suit, he ruled.

Baker's suit alleged that she was hired by KRGI, a Grand Island radio station, but later dismissed because of her sex.

The Stuart Co. provides management services to the Grand Island Broadcasting Co.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
